CANADA—FRIDAY, DECEMBER 2nd, 1910

The following is supplied by the Local Option Committee.

LOCAL OPTION AND ITS EFFECT

An Address Delivered Last Night by J. W. Aikins.

Statement Made to the Effect that Local Business Man Who Signed the Petition was Threatened with Boycott.

"Every man who deals in liquor in this city is striking a blow at every legitimate business in the city." That was the assertion made by J. W. Aikins, of Toronto, and formerly of Nova Scotia, at the 3rd avenue Methodist church, where he delivered an address on how local option had affected the maritime provinces.

Dealing with the question as to how the bar helped business the speaker put forward a forcible argument by showing that the men who gave up drink usually began to have higher ideals and afterwards spent what he generally spent in liquor in purchasing articles to make his home and wife and family more comfortable. Other points he went on to point out were that no matter where they found a barroom it decreased the value of the property all around, and wherever they found a bar room in a manufacturing town it increased the cost of production in the town. One startling fact he put forward was if they took all the grain that had been grown last year from the Great Lakes to the Rockies and turned it into dollars it would not be sufficient to pay Canada's whiskey bill.

The Rev. W. W. Abbott, who presided, said that one of the principal arguments they had to meet was that local option would hurt business, but he had not met a man yet who could explain how it would hurt business. They knew that those who were heartily in sympathy with the liquor traffic would in a measure and for a time boycott those who were not in sympathy with them. In that way some men's business might suffer for a little. One business man in the city had told him that when he signed the petition for local option in the city he immediately received word from some of the hotel keepers that they were done with him so far as his business was concerned, but already orders were beginning to come from the old sources.

FAILURE AND LIQUOR.

"The first and most seductive peril, and the destroyer of most young men, is the drinking of liquor. I am no temperance lecturer in disguise, but a man who knows and tells you what observation has proved to him; and I say to you that you are more likely to fail in your career from acquiring the habit of drinking liquor than from any or all other temptations likely to assail you.

You may yield to almost any other temptation and may reform—may brace up and, if not recover lost ground, at least remain in the race, and secure and maintain a respectable position.

But from failure caused by the drink habit recovery is almost impossible. I have known but few exceptions to the rule."

—Andrew Carnegie.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

On Wednesday evening, Dec. 7th, at 7.30, a public meeting will be held in the Town Hall for boys. All the boys of the town are invited to attend. Rev. Rural Dean Dibb will be the principal speaker. Good music will be furnished including a solo by Capt. Vickers.

TO THE EDITOR:

Sir:—I do not care to enter into a newspaper controversy with an anonymous correspondent—especially with one who writes such long letters as those signed "Truth." But really Sir, "Truth" is shirking the main issue. The bar-room in the past has done untold injury to the community. Has it ever done any good? That is the question upon which we should welcome the search-light of Truth.

Local Option Failure.

There are several aspects of the working of the Local Option by-law which are not without their own instructiveness. These aspects are to be seen after the by-law has been carried and "no-license" is in practical operation. While the trumpets of the Local Option party are being blown, and enthusiasm wrought up to fever pitch, a number of the really important aspects of the working of "no-license" are apt to be overlooked. It is only when people descend from the clouds to solid earth again, and in the cold clear dawn of the morning after, have to face facts that they begin to realize that Local Option things are not what they seem.

Looking over the license records of the Province of Ontario, the first fact which meets one is that during the last four years over four hundred liquor licenses have been extinguished either by Local Option votes or reduction by-laws. It would only be natural to deduce from such a large withdrawal of facilities from the province that there would be a corresponding drop in the consumption of alcoholic liquors, and an access of virtue great enough to be noticeable. Neither of these things have yet happened. The consumption of alcoholic liquors goes on as before, last year, in fact, all over Canada, showed a bigger proportion of alcohol consumed than in the previous year. Taking Ontario alone, the quantities of Canadian distilled spirits and Canadian brewed ales were larger than in the previous year, and the imports of spirits and wines were greater than ever. If, therefore, the people in "no-license" districts are drinking less, then the people in the license districts are drinking their own and their "dry" neighbor's share also. This is an altogether too extravagant statement to be worthy of credence, and the only conclusion to be come to is that drinking goes on in the ostensibly "dry" districts, and that the inhabitants of these "dry" districts are frequent visitors to the nearest license centre.

In this connection it is interesting to note that, according to the annual reports of the Ontario License Department, the convictions for breaches of the Liquor License Act against "license holders have decreased from 504 to 468 in four years' time. During the same period the convictions recorded against non-license holders have increased from 258 to 803, while the separate table for districts under Local Option shows that convictions in the same four years have risen from 19 to 168. In Local Option districts the fines imposed for breaches of the Liquor License Act in 1906-7 amounted to $4,630. Last year the amount was $7,260. These are highly suggestive figures. They point to the existence of a demand which Local Option has not even "scotched," far less killed. "No-license" may interpose some difficulties in the way of a man getting his liquor, but judging by the figures, he gets it all the same. It were surely infinitely better for him to get it legitimately rather than surreptitiously under conditions which often make for demoralization.

William Carrol, who is held at Blind River for murder, escaped from the London asylum for the insane in April, 1908.

'Town of Winchester' Testimony Exploded.

Mr. Editor,
Is the cause of Local Option so lame and impotent that it is in need of the disgraceful methods that are being resorted to in this Municipality? If so the sooner it is defeated the better for the town. A citizen it appears cannot raise his voice in argument against it, but he is deluged with abusive epithets. Is every rate payer who does not think in the same line as the Literature Committee to be subjected to the vilifying processes of this self-constituted censorship? A most misleading contribution appears in your last issue in the form of a letter from the "Town of Winchester." Perhaps the chairman of this polite committee will in his own characteristic and civil manner inform your readers where this important Town is located? The census taker of Canada has not yet discovered it. There is a small village in Dundas county by that name, but it would trouble even this powerful committee to find twenty-one business men in it, yet over its own name the committee has the nerve to publish a communication supposed to emanate spontaneously from "The Town of Winchester, Ont., signed by twenty-one business men of the place." It sounds well to quote from the opinions of "our largest employers of labor." Would the committee mind setting forth the names of just a few of the largest employers of labor in this very important "Town," giving the number of employees on the regular pay list? Never mind the smaller factories and business enterprises, but we really would like just a few of the largest. They must have been away fishing when the Assessor went round, for the names of no such magnates appear upon the village assessment roll.
We would like to know who drafted this important misleading communication, for if his alleged statements of fact are no more reliable than the inferences he would have us draw in respect to the magnitude of this one horse village, the sooner he retires from the position of furnishing campaign literature, the better for the cause he is supporting. Now Mr. Editor, if the cause of Local Option cannot be maintained except by the use of abusive language and by such gross exaggeration and deceit as is practiced in this letter from Winchester, is it not about time every self respecting citizen raises his voice against such methods. The rate-payers should give a patient hearing to both sides. There is no occasion for abuse and no occasion for trickery, and those who resort to either are simply dragging in the dust a cause which should not be so degraded.

Yours Truly,
Citizen.

THE FACTORY AND CHILD

ENVIRONS IN ENGLAND MAR AND KILL.

Well-Paid Lancashire Cotton Oper- atives are Breeding a Poor Race.

Lancashire has a much higher rate of infant mortality than the great city of London. The London Daily News expressed surprise at this, and a correspondent, thoroughly acquainted with the social conditions of the cotton spinning district, wrote that paper the following explanation of Lancashire's greater death rate:

Just so long as the Lancashire girl enters the mill at twelve years old and remains there after her marriage at, say, twenty, and during all the years she is bearing children; and just so long as the babies are carried out at 5.30 every morning to be put in the charge of incompetent persons for the rest of the day, fed on diluted Swiss or half-sour cow's milk out of sticky filthy bottles, pacified by dummy teats dipping in soothing syrup, just so long as these things go on will the infant mortality percentage in Lancashire be what it is.

HAPPY THOSE WHO DIE.

And the babies who die are the lucky ones; hosts of those who survive their miserable rickety childhood grow up with bow-leg, knock-knee, hump-back and other hideous deformities, not to speak of the general dwarfing of the whole industrial population.

The women, on the whole—there are brilliant exceptions, of course—are totally ignorant of domestic economy, and how are they likely to be otherwise, working as they do from 6 a.m. to 5.30 p.m. during all those impressionable years when domestic economy may become a habit never again to be acquired?

The art of domestic cooking is almost a lost one in industrial Lancashire, and Southerners are apt to be staggered by the extraordinary number of shops supplying ready-cooked food. The trade in tinned goods is enormous, as may easily be seen by visits to cottage ashbins, and a reference to any grocer. I have myself seen a family consisting of mother, father, and four children, ranging from one to six years, enjoying an evening meal of strong coffee without milk, canned salmon, and new muffins! The mother was almost speechless with indignation when told that she was

POISONING HER CHILDREN.

It is only children with iron constitutions who can come through an ordeal like this, and, as I said before, many of them are absolutely unfitted for life's struggle by such a domestic regime. Ignorance has a heavy toll to pay!

Poverty, as it is known further south, does not exist here, and as a cause may be regarded as negligible. What is wanted in Lancashire is the "Mother," the bustling happy, managing, intelligent mother that has almost disappeared. Some of us who daily see the maimed and neglected little ones pining for the care which only such a mother can give, wonder how long it will be before the eyes of the nation

FEED SCHOOL CHILDREN

THE POOR SHOULD BE FED OR GIVEN WORK.

The Defective Development of New York School Children is Appalling.

Insufficient food, with bad ventilation and other sanitary faults as secondary causes, are held responsible for the defective development of an enormous number of school children in New York city, according to American Medicine.

"The defective development of school children is appalling," says the writer. "Enlarged tonsils, adenoids, defective sight, hearing and breathing, small bones, shreddy muscles, defective teeth, and many other things are reported in such a large number of cases as to give considerable alarm, though, as we have often remarked, the percentage of cases is probably less than among the city poor of a century ago, or even fifty years ago.

"It is now said that 35 per cent. are underfed in New York city; some go to school without any food at all and are weak with hunger. These weaklings are furnishing a host of cases of infection later, and are such a menace to the well-to-do that the latter must take steps in self-defence.

PUBLIC HEALTH AT STAKE.

"We must do something—either let the little things leave school and go to work to earn bread and milk which their fathers cannot buy for them, or we must feed them ourselves, and incidentally make laws declaring a man a criminal who produces babies beyond his feeding power. Public health is at stake. What shall we do?

"Free meals for poor school children seem to be growing in favor in spite of the serious objections to such a step toward Socialism, and yet it appears to be the only thing to do if we are to continue our present policy of preventing the little starvelings from working. The poor man has never been able to earn enough to feed his own offspring and claims that, if the children are compelled to go to school instead of helping support the family in the manner they have done ever since there have been 'poor folk' then food must be supplied.

FARM LABOR WHOLESALE.

"We must remember that our colonial ancestors could not permit their children to go to school for more than a few weeks, and then only when there was a lull in the farm work. If the law had compelled school attendance the year round, the farm work would have suffered, and there would soon have been hunger. Boys were a necessity and are still so. We must realize that it is not work which injures these city children, but unwholesome work, and Heaven knows there is a superabundance of that kind in the slums.

"Medical science cannot support the laws against child-labor itself; on the contrary, there is a lot of evidence that children working moderately at wholesome things, as on the farm, are the better for it. Many of the nation's leaders were child laborers, perhaps because of it. The pampered brat is often a weakling in adult life. Unless we asked to make a copy of the letter that the boy confessed that he was the author of it himself, and that he had conceived this method in order to get money for an approaching fete. He also added that he had acquired the idea of raising money in this way from reading of the exploits of some boys in Paris who had killed and robbed a bill-collector.

DRESS FOR THE CORONATION.

British Peers and Peeresses In- structed About Their Robes.

In preparation for the coronation ceremony next summer the Duke of Norfolk, as Earl Marshal of England, is commanded by the King to request all peers, peeresses and dowager peeresses who are entitled to attend the ceremony to send their Christian names and addresses to him in order that their letters of summons may be prepared without delay. Only these who reply before January 1 will receive the royal command.

With this announcement contained in a supplement of the London Gazette the other week the Earl Marshal also issues his order concerning the robes and coronets to be worn. It says:

The robe or mantle of the peers is to be of crimson velvet, edged with miniver, the cape furred with miniver pure and powdered with bars or rows of ermine, i. e., narrow pieces of black fur, according to their degree, viz.: Barons, two rows; viscounts, two rows and a half; earls, three rows; marquises, three rows and a half; dukes, four rows.

The said mantles or robes to be worn over full court dress, uniform or regimentals.

The coronets are to be of silver gilt; the cape of crimson velvet turned up with ermine, with a gold tassel on the top and no jewels or precious stones are to be set or used in the coronets or counterfeit pearls instead of silver balls.

The coronet of a baron to have on the circle or rim six silver balls at equal distances; that of a viscount to have on the circle sixteen silver balls; that of an earl to have eight silver balls raised upon points with gold strawberry leaves between the points; that of a marquise to have four gold strawberry leaves and four silver balls alternately, the latter a little raised on points above the rim, while the coronet of a duke is to have on the circle eight gold strawberry leaves.

In the case of a Baroness the robe is to be of crimson velvet, the cape furred with miniver pure and powdered with two bars or rows of ermine, the mantle to be edged round with miniver pure two inches in breadth, and the train to be three feet on the ground; the coronet to be according to her degree, viz.: a rim or circle with six pearls (represented by silver balls) upon the same, not raised upon points.

For other ladies of title the length of the train is to be: Viscountesses, a yard and a quarter. Countesses, a yard and a half. Marchionesses, a yard and three quarters. Duchesses, two yards.

Other elaborate details of dress are given with variations, according to rank, in the extent of the cape powdering and the number of strawberry leaves and silver balls. All the caps of the coronets are to be of crimson velvet, turned up with ermine, with a tassel of gold on the

INSURANCE BY THE STATE.

Plan of the British Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Mr. Lloyd-George made an interesting statement about the coming sickness and invalidity insurance scheme and its effect on friendly societies to a deputation of the Manchester Unity of Oddfellows. Among the points which Mr. Lloyd-George proposes to embody in his scheme, as brought out by the discussion, are that:—

It will be compulsory to join either the State insurance scheme or a friendly society. Friendly societies will not be injured, but the reverse; sound friendly society finance will be encouraged by a discrimination against dividing societies and those in which the expense of administration amounts to half the proceeds.

Mr. Lloyd-George said there were six million members of friendly societies, which left 10,000,000 men outside. As a matter of fact there were many more millions outside the societies than in them. Both parties were committed to a contributory system of insurance, and if the Government were turned out tomorrow he ventured to say they would get a bill more or less on the same lines from the other side. Once they departed from the dogmatic individualistic position it was purely a question of a scheme.

The first thing he did after getting information of what was done in foreign countries was to send for representatives of friendly societies. He had had several talks with them with a view of ascertaining the opinion of experts in the friendly societies world. He gave a guarantee that he would receive a deputation from them, from the national deposit societies and the insurance societies. He wished to see everybody before he finally framed his scheme. All he had done at the present moment was to frame a scheme very largely in conjunction with representatives of friendly societies. He had submitted that to well-known actuaries. He knew pretty well what it would cost; he had come to the conclusion he could find the money.

The cardinal proposition on which he based the scheme was not only recognition of the great work done by friendly societies in the past, but recognition of the value and importance of continuing their work in the future. In the long run they would find his scheme would strengthen the friendly societies, strengthen their hold on the working classes, and would afford them an opportunity of extending their work.

kind in the slums.

Many of the nation's leaders were child laborers, perhaps because of it. The pampered brat is often a weakling in adult life. Unless we revoke the school law or the child-labor law, ordinary humanity compels us to feed the poor children now deprived of food by these laws. Which shall it be?"

"EDUCATED DEFECTIVES."

"Is universal education really a National necessity? The question is not outside of the sphere of medicine, but in the middle of it. Anatomy and psychology have already proved that quite a percentage of the poor are not possessed of sufficient intelligence to comprehend more than the three elementary—reading, writing and arithmetic—and mighty little of them. In the types are the hewers of wood and drawers of water, who never use even these elements. If we can only make up our mind that it is a waste of time and money to try to educate them, then perhaps it will be possible to let them go to work.

"We must realize that even unwholesome work of the well fed may not be as injurious as the present starving idleness.

"A healthy, well fed, but densely ignorant workman is a better national asset than the educated defectives now seen. We hear less and less of the foolish assertions of the pedagogs that education improves citizenship and morals. So perhaps we had better ease up a bit on compulsory education first, then on the child-labor laws."

ATTEMPT AT BLACKMAIL.

15-Year-Old Tries to Wrest $5,000 From Manager of Steel Works.

A boy of fifteen made an audacious attempt to obtain by blackmail the sum of $5,000 from the manager of the Longwy Steel Works, Paris, a gentleman named Alexandre Dreux. The youth, whose name is Peryonet, is a printer's apprentice. He presented himself with a letter at M. Dreux's private residence just after dark, and, asking to see that gentleman, handed him the following letter:

"Sir—Will you give the bearer of this letter the sum of $5,000. If you do not do this at once I shall blow up your home. This is the first notice you will receive. You should pay in bank notes. Do not try to inform the police because that will not help you; but rather the opposite. (Signed.)

"The Chief of the Red Hand."
"P.S.—To avoid arousing the suspicions of the boy who brings this letter, please put the notes in a bag."

M. Dreux did not pay the money but gave the boy a note, saying that it would be handed over on the following day at five o'clock. The boy then left, followed by one of Dreux's employes from the steel works, who had him arrested in Longwy. With extraordinary effrontery the printer's apprentice asserted that the letter had been given to him by a stranger whom he had met near the residence of Dreux. It was only when he was

RESOURCEFUL BURGLAR.

He Got Out of Prison by a Trick, and Got in Again by Another.

The exploits of a burglar named Paul Ruch have set all of Switzerland laughing. Ruch was undergoing a long sentence at the prison of Sion (Valais), where the International Congress of the Societies for Aiding Liberated Prisoners took place recently in the governor's wing of the prison building.

Somehow Ruch managed to slip in among the delegates, took the best overcoat, hat and stick he could find in the cloakroom, and, after listening to a few speeches, walked out of the prison by the front door.

He resumed his professional duties by committing several burglaries around the north end of Lake Geneva, but was again captured after an exploit showing the exceptional resources of this criminal.

Towards dawn, one morning, he was at Chexbres looking round for his next job, when he saw two burglars ransacking an unoccupied villa and carrying their booty to a cart hidden in a lane. He waited an hour until they had filled the cart, and then, as they were about to start with their plunder, Ruch shouted, "Gendarmes, surround them."

The burglars ran off, and Ruch wheeled the cart and its contents to Bouveret, where he was arrested while attempting to sell some of the goods.

Even the gendarmes laughed when they learned how Ruch obtained his booty. He will be sent back to the prison at Sion.

EXIT THE ZOUAVE.

Picturesque Uniform Does Not Conform to Modern Ideas.

No more Zouaves! The most picturesque uniform in the French Army has been condemned by a War Department devoid of sentiment. In future the gallant "Zouzou" will not captivate the feminine eye with his saucy red fez, little bolero jacket, baggy red breeches and white gaiters.

All this bravery is doomed because it is regarded by the "powers that be" as too unpractical and expensive for modern war conditions. The collarless bolero "begins and ends too suddenly for health," so the transmogrified Zouave is to have a tunic of normal length of the cavalry pattern. He will also wear plain knickerbockers and gaiters, and his fez will be smaller, blue instead of red, while the size of the tassel will be reduced.

In ordering this change, the War Department has obviously not consulted the girls of France, who are indignant at the transformation of their favorite Zouaves into something like the ordinary linesman.

PRINCESS WANTS PLAYMATES

Queen's Daughter Would Like School Companions.

There has existed for some time past some difference of opinion between members of the royal family, says M. A. P., as to the upbringing of the Princess Mary.

The difficulty in connection with the training and education of the Princess lies in the fact that Her Royal Highness is an only girl, and of necessity it has been rather a problem to find her suitable companions of her own age and sex.

Princess Alexandra and Maud of Fife, cousins, who have been frequent visitors at Marlborough House in the past, are both several years the senior of Princess Mary, while the little daughters of Mrs. Derek Keppel, who is one of Queen Mary's most intimate friends, are rather too young to make suitable playmates for Her Royal Highness.

Miss Louvina Knollys, daughter of Lord Knollys, and a great favorite with Queen Mary, and indeed with all the royal family, is also several years older than Princess Mary, though the two are very great friends.

Queen Alexandra rather favored the idea of sending her granddaughter to school, but Queen Mary has always been reluctant to do so, partly on account of the great difficulty of finding a suitable establishment for the Princess, but also because Her Majesty thinks a girl is better brought up in her own home than anywhere else, a view in which King George entirely coincides.

But the Princess's own wishes are also to be considered. Her Royal Highness has of late been urging her mother to send her to some school and it is possible that her wish may be granted before very long. The Princess is immensely fond of her home, but the desire of playmates of her own age is a very natural one and it is impossible for her to have them except at school.

TO ELECTRIFY RAILWAYS.

Russia has invited the world to assist in electrifying its railroads, and will hold an exhibit April 28 to June 28, 1911, in St. Petersburg, at which tests will be made of all new inventions in electric railroading. At the same time the seventy-fifth anniversary of the introduction of railways into Russia will be celebrated.

AND THE WEALTH OF RUSSIA

FROM FARMER IS THE BACKBONE OF THE COUNTRY.

As a Result of Good Harvests the Budget Figures Shown are Remarkable.

The old police-economic axiom that the wealth of a county depends on what is taken out of the ground was never more convincingly demonstrated than by the present conditions in Russia. M. Kokovtseff, the Minister of Finance, in presenting the budget for 1911 for examination by the Budget Committee of the Duma; emphasizes this point. He takes pains to emphasize the overwhelming importance to Russia of a good harvest, incidentally thereby driving deeper the once-ignored truth that Russia stands or falls by the land.

In order fully to appreciate the exceeding value of a good harvest, the note takes the year from July 1 to July 1 for purposes of comparison. By this mode of reckoning, which allows of including the figures for half the current year, the increase of actual (not estimated) revenue in the twelvemonth over that of the previous twelvemonth was no less than some $135,000,000, of which the greater part fell in the present year. This increase represents over 10 per cent. increase of income to the Russian State, or, taking an average for a number of years past, good and bad (namely, the years 1903 and 1909), the increase of income due directly to the good harvest is 4 per cent.

A DESERVED COMPLIMENT.

M. Kokovtseff, in his "explanatory note," pays a deserved compliment to the Duma. Its reservation in certain respects have not been found in any way embarrassing to the Ministry while on all occasions the Duma has shown its readiness to meet the calls of the Ministry for supplementary estimates for purposes of "extraordinary" expenditure. Considerable space is devoted to the once-puzzling item which appears in every Russian budget of "free balance at the disposal of the State." This amounted to no less than $200,000,000 on the eve of the Russo-Japanese war; five years later it fell as low as $1,000,000. The beginning of the year 1904 was a maximum figure for this item, but M. Kokovtseff estimates that again, thanks chiefly to the bumper harvest of 1909, his "free balance" on January 1st, 1911, will not fall far short of $150,000,000. Of this he will require only some 3 per cent. for the purpose of balancing the total (ordinary and extraordinary) budget. On the other hand, he foresees large "extraordinary" expenditure on the Great Siberian Railway reconstruction and the building of the Amur Railway.

REVENUE INCREASED.

The budget for 1911 estimates an increase of revenue of $55,000,000, the total budget, divided as usual into ordinary and extraordinary revenue and expenditure, amounting to $1,415,000,000. The considerable increase in estimated expenditure is justified by the actual results of Treasury returns for the first half year of 1910 over the receipts estimated for at the beginning of the year. This result is

CHEMISTS AID POLICE

TEST TUBE, MICROSCOPE AND SPECTROSCOPE.

Criminals in France and England Were Brought to Justice.

Medical detectives, as the analysts employed by Scotland Yard are called, invariably carry through their duties with skill, certainty and absence of prejudice. They have mastered the action and character of every poison under the sun, and this fact, being well known, has decreased poisoning to a considerable extent during recent years.

Practically the poisoners can hide nothing from the modern analyst, for that gentleman is not only familiar with all poisons, but can recognize their presence almost as easily as he can recognize the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral. By the aid of his test tube, his microscope and his spectroscope, he is able to lay bare the poisoners' secret and track him down. If any great criminal was suspected of poisoning his wife the analysts, upon examining the remains, would be able to prove what poison was used and in what quantity.

MARVELOUS TESTS.

Delicate to a marvelous degree are the tests employed by analysts in the case of poisons. If a man were to be poisoned with arsenic tomorrow and were buried without being examined internally, an analyst could a quarter of a century later gather from the remains of the body a considerable amount of the poison which killed him and in the same state as that in which it was administered.

Probably arsenic has been more frequently used by murderers as a death-dealer than any other poison, and arsenic is a very peculiar poison. It is a well-known fact that many men and women take arsenic in small doses as a medicine, while the inhabitants of Syria are said to eat it as freely as we eat salt. To a person who has never touched, eaten or smelt arsenic a medium-sized dose would have a fatal effect. No matter how it got into the system it would be deadly, for arsenic kills whether it is swallowed, rubbed into a wound, or breathed as a vapor. Chapman, who was hanged for poisoning his mistress, used arsenic, and the drug was also used in the memorable Maybrick case.

Mme. Lafarge poisoned her husband, an ironmaster, by means of arsenic. While M. Lafarge was in Paris on a visit his wife pretended to send him a parcel, in which was her portrait, made by his mother, and a letter. This parcel was sealed in the presence of witnesses. When the parcel reached Lafarge it contained only one large cake. He ate this, and nine days later he died. Mme. Lafarge was arrested and charged with murder by poisoning. At the trial it was alleged that she had made the large cake with arsenic as one of the ingredients, and substituted it for the five small ones. She was found guilty after a trial

FIVE SMALL CAKES

MONSTER SHIPS.

Predicted That Battleships and Ocean Liners Will be Larger.

Admiral Markham was asked the other day if he thought we were ever going to stop increasing the size of battleships. "I will tell you a story," he replied. "In 1896 Mr. John Burns, then head of the Cunard Company, placed in my hands the plans for two new steamships for his line and asked my opinion. After studying the plans for a whole evening, I told him that I thought any ships built according to those plans would be too large to be practicable. Those ships were the Campania and Lucania, 13,000-ton ships, less than half the tonnage of the Mauretania and the Lusitania."

This candid admission of error is as instructive as it is pleasing. Already the Mauretania and Lusitania are far outdistanced by the new White Star monsters of 45,000 tons. In battleships the advance has been, if anything, more striking. The crack ship of the American navy during the Spanish War was the Oregon and she displaced 10,242 tons. It is only four years since the Dreadnought was considered the last word in ship-building. She displaced less than 18,000 tons. Already she is sliding into the back-number list. The newest ships to be built in England will be 12,000 tons larger and will have 12 13.5 inch guns in place of her 10 12 inch. It seems only a day or two since the Oregon and Seymour's English flagship, the Centurion, were the pick of the combined fleets that lay off the Taku bar during the Boxer rising. The Centurion has just been sent to the scrap heap. She will probably fetch about $150,000 at auction. Who, therefore, would be brave enough to prophesy that we have come anywhere near the limit in building battleships or ocean liners. Sir William Van Horne expects to see the day when the Canadian Pacific Railroad will be running ships 2,000 feet long across the Atlantic. And Sir William has been too much of a real constructive agent to talk loosely about what may be done. His ships of the future, if we remember rightly, are to be nearly 1,000 feet broad, which will entirely do away with any rolling motion.

PIRACY IN CHINA.

River Pirates of Manchuria are Numerous and Bloodthirsty.

Piracy still flourishes in Manchuria, according to advices from Vladivostok. The Sungari River appears to be infested by desperate bands of "Chunchuses," whose raids on passing steamers are becoming a terror to Russian travelers.

Recently a bloodthirsty horde boarded a Russian steamer, overpowered all resistance from the native crew, which was somewhat feeble, and murdered two Russian male passengers. They were about to put a Russian woman and two children to death, but the Chinese passengers interferred, and the pirates contented themselves with robbing them of everything they possessed, even their clothing. After throwing the bodies of the two murdered men overboard, the pirates made off, and it is quite impossible to hope for any punitive action increase of revenue of $55,000,000, the total budget, divided as usual into ordinary and extraordinary revenue and expenditure, amounting to $1,415,000,000. The considerable increase in estimated expenditure is justified by the actual results of Treasury returns for the first half year of 1910 over the receipts estimated for at the beginning of the year. This result is frankly attributed by the Minister to the magnificent harvest of the year 1909, which gave a fillip to every other source of revenue. Even railway takings increased by about $25,000,000, the drink monopoly by over $15,000,000, and the sugar quasi-monopoly increased by over $10,000,000.

BRITAIN'S AERIAL FLEET.

Two Biplanes are Ordered in France for Military Use.

The British War Office is now taking steps to possess an aerial fleet. Orders have just been given to M. Henri Farman and to M. Paulhan for two biplanes of the military type. These are expected to be delivered in England in about two months' time. They will not be the first aeroplanes belonging to the British Army, for a Blériot monoplane has, it is said, proved a great success, and negotiations are taking place now which may result in the purchase by Great Britain of several more aeroplanes of the same kind. The Farman biplane which has just been ordered will be a splendid machine. M. Farman himself states that he has great hopes that it will prove almost perfect for its purpose. It will carry two passengers, and will hold petrol for a five-hour flight. It is so constructed that in front of one of the occupants there is a space which will carry a large quantity of explosives. The cost is a little over $5,000.

A PRINCE OF THE SLUMS.

The late Prince Francis of Teck had for years been the best known of the Queen's brothers, for like his sister he had always taken a great interest in philanthropic work, says the Gentlewoman. He had worked in slum parishes for years and probably knew almost as much as a curate in a poor district of the manners and customs, hardships and habits of the submerged tenth. He perfectly understood the young hooligans and took just as much practical interest in all works for the alleviation of their poverty and their moral improvement as does the Queen who with her own hands makes dozens of garments for poor children during the year.

GIRL FIRE FIGHTER.

An interesting and unusual incident took place at the Hurstpierpoint (England) Volunteer Fire Brigade's annual competition, held on the recreation ground recently—the presentation of a silver rose vase by the brigade to Miss D. Laurence-Smith, in recognition of the valuable assistance she gave the fire brigade with whom she worked twelve hours continuously at a recent farm fire at Blackstone. Capt. Pearsey, in command at the brigade, asked Mrs. Borrer, who distributed the prizes after the competition, to make the presentation on behalf of himself and his men. Miss Laurence-Smith acknowledged the gift in a few words, and hearty cheers were given.—Lady's Pictorial.

ence of witnesses. When the parcer reached Lafarge it contained only one large cake. He ate this, and nine days later he died. Mme. Lafarge was arrested and charged with murder by poisoning. At the trial it was alleged that she had made the large cake with arsenic as one of the ingredients, and substituted it for the five small ones. She was found guilty after a trial exceeding a fortnight, and condemned to imprisonment for life.

To micro-photography the discovery of many a crime is due. The spectroscope is infallible in revealing the presence of the minutest trace of blood, but it is unable to distinguish between human and animal blood. The microscope can, however. The corpuscles of different mammalia can only be distinguished by their size and shape, and it can be seen that without the microscope it would be impossible to draw a distinction between the blood of a man and the blood of an animal.

The corpuscles of both men and animals are all circular with the exception of those of the llama; alpaca, camel and their kind, which are oval.

Some time ago a man suspected of murder was found to own an axe covered with blood. An analyst examined the blood, and found that it was that of a goat, the corpuscles measuring 41 tenths of a micron. On this evidence he was FOUND NOT GUILTY.

Cloth stained with red thought to be blood is touched with ammonia. If the stain is caused by fruit juice, it turns blue or green; if by Condy's fluid it becomes blue, and if by zochinid it becomes crimson. But if it be blood, human or animal, the color under the influence of the ammonia does not change in the least.

M. Rogler, who was found burned to death in a cottage in France some years ago, was said to have been murdered. An analyst took a few drops of blood from the dead man's lungs and examined them by means of the spectroscope. He discovered that their condition was normal, which proved that death must have occurred before the cottage was set on fire.

A man was found in Cornwall with his head battered in, evidently with some blunt instrument. The detectives who took up the case found a hammer some distance from the corpse. Upon it were a couple of grey hairs, and a medical man declared that they came from some one's eyebrows. On comparing the hairs with those of the deceased's eyebrows they corresponded. The two hairs on the hammer brought the murderer to justice.

BLIND GIRL'S POULTRY YARD

Recently a writer in Feathered Life had the pleasure of meeting a young Scotch girl who though almost blind is active and accomplished to a very remarkable degree. One of her principal interests is her poultry yard, and there her almost unaided efforts have met with truly wonderful success. Her yearly balance sheet shows substantial and increasing profits, while the care of her birds proves a source of much interest and provides a good deal of healthy outdoor exercise. She keeps careful and accurate accounts, a Braille slate being used for memoranda. She uses a typewriter for correspondence.

male passengers. They were about to put a Russian woman and two children to death, but the Chinese passengers interfered, and the pirates contented themselves with robbing them of everything they possessed, even their clothing. After throwing the bodies of the two murdered men overboard, the pirates made off, and it is quite impossible to hope for any punitive action from the Chinese officials who are either terrorized by, or in league with, these marauders.

DANCING CURES IMBECILITY.

Said to Awaken Slumbering Intelligence.

The latest cure for feeble-mindedness is dancing. It was declared by Dr. Farries, an asylum superintendent, at a conference at Birmingham, England, recently, that nothing gives the feeble-minded child more confidence or induces better behavior than dancing. He saw no reason for separating the sexes; on the contrary he believed in their enjoyment of each other's society.

"Dancing," he said, "is a word which occupies a prominent position on my time tables."

His audience laughed, but the doctor was serious. His experience was, he said, that dancing awakened slumbering intelligence and brought intellectual life and proper understanding to minds previously or merely vacant.

"Nothing," he said, "gives them manly thoughts more quickly."

Cricket and football had proved a complete failure, but since the introduction of dancing the imbecile children in his institution had shown an awakening of interest in this and other pastimes.

KILLING BACILLI.

Prof. Sims Woodhead reports that the experiments made at Cambridge, England, on the sterilization of water by chlorine and chlorine compounds have given "most startling results." One part of available chlorine to 2,000,000 parts of water sufficed to kill all non-spore-bearing bacilli, including the typhoid, and probably also the cholera, type, within half an hour, even in the presence of an appreciable amount of organic matter. The unimportant spore-bearing bacilli were not killed. An experimental tank containing 80,000 gallons of water was used after the preliminary tests, and equal success was obtained. Those employed in the work drank freely of the water without noting any of the injurious effects.

MISTLETOE A MENACE.

Few people who know mistletoe only as a desirable feature of Christmas decorations understand that the plant is a parasite dangerous to the life of trees in the regions in which it grows. It is only a question of time, after mistletoe once begins to grow upon a tree, before the tree itself will be killed. The parasite saps the life of the infected branches. Fortunately it is of slow growth, taking years to develop to large proportions, but when neglected, it invariably ruins all trees it reaches. The only method of extermination is the cutting down of diseased trees.

WOMAN CHOSEN MAYOR.

Executive Head of Borough of Oldham, England.

One woman who will attract attention during the coronation year is Mrs. Charles E. Lees, who has just been selected as Mayor of Oldham, England. A couple of very small boroughs have vested this executive honor in women, but Oldham takes the lead among the big towns of England.

Mrs. Lees has been a generous benefactor to her home town for many years. She has been a member of the council for three years and has taken an active part in civic affairs for a much longer period. She is the only citizen upon whom the freedom of the borough has been conferred.

Possessed of considerable wealth, she is actively associated with the firms of Lees & Co., machinists, and Eli Lees & Co., cotton spinners, these houses furnishing employment to thousands of workers. She is president of the Oldham branch of the National Union of women workers, and her charities are manifold. She is assisted in her systematic work of benevolence by her daughter.

"Through no effort on my part," said Mrs. Lees in discussing her acceptance of the honor conferred upon her by her fellow councilors, "wealth came to me and I have considered it a bounden duty on my part as well as a pleasure to spend much of it for the good of the town where a great part of it was made and for the benefit, among others, of those by whose labors it was acquired.

"I won't say," she added with a gentle laugh, "that I am going to carry out any resolutions during the period of my mayoralty; one has to go along steadily. There is nothing really worth while in one's life, though, except the interest you take in the work that comes to your hand."

THE SECRET OF HER POWER;

Or, A TRUTH NEVER OLD.

CHAPTER X.—(Cont'd)

If any one were to tell Dorothy Usk that she had been making up fibs on this occasion she would be mortally offended and surprised. She would reply that she had only been brochant an peu; putting the thing as it ought to be put, as it must be put, if Gervase is to obtain the hand of Xenia Sabaroff, and if nobody is to know anything which ought not to be known. Indeed, she has pondered so much on this manner of putting it, that she has almost ended in believing that her vision of the story is the true one.

"Blanford's feelings, indeed!" she thinks, with great contempt. "As if any pain he might feel—if he did feel any—would not be due and fitting retribution upon him for the horrid life he has led and the way he has played fast and loose with women. He can go back to his Hindoos, whose figures are so superior to any European's! But George is always so absurd about his friends."

Whereupon, being in an irritated and unkind mood, she desires the servant, who just then announces the visit of the rector of the parish, to show that reverend person into the small library where she knows that Dulcia Waverley is trying to get rid of her headache. It is very seldom that she is unwise enough to indulge in this kind of domestic vengeance; but at this moment it seems sweet to her.

The unfortunate and innocent rector finds the lord of Surrenden monosyllabic and impolite, but Lady Waverley, womanlike is wholly equal to the occasion, and in her sweet, low voice discourses of village choirs and village readings and village medicines and morals with such divine patience and feminine adaptability that the good man dismisses from his mind as impossible what he had certainly fancied he saw in the moment when the library door opened before him.

If ever there was purity incarnate, Dulcia Waverley looks it, with her white gown, her madonna-like hair, her dewy, pensive eyes, and her appealing smile. She suggests the portraits in the Keepsakes and Forget-me-nots of fifty years ago; she has always about her the faint old-fashioned perfume of attar of roses, and she wears her soft, fair hair in Raphaelite bands, which in any other woman would look absurd; but her experience has told her that, despite all change in modes and manners, the surest weapons to subdue strong men are Sally smashing the porcelain in her model dairy.

No doubt the relations of her cousin and her guest have not been always what they ought to have been; but she does not wish to think of this, and she will not think of it; by-gones are always best buried. The people who manage to be happy are those who understand the art of burying them, and use plenty of quicklime.

During the twenty years which have elapsed since her presentation Dolly Usk has had a very varied experience of men and women, and has continually been solicited to interfere in their love affairs, or has even interfered without being solicited. She likes the feeling of being a diva ex machina to her friends, and though she has so decidedly refused Gervase her assistance to discover the state of Xenia Sabaroff's feelings toward him she begins in her own mind immediately to cast about for some indirect means of learning it, and arranges in her own fancy the whole story as it will sound prettiest and most proper, if she be ever called on to relate it to the world.

She has a talent at putting such stories so nicely in order that anything which may be objectionable in them is altogether invisible, as a clever gaisure will so arrange old dices on a court train that the darts and stains in them are wholly hidden away. She likes exercising her ingenuity in this way, and although the narrative given her by Gervase has certainly seemed to her objectionable, and one which places the hero of it in an unpleasant light, it may with tact be turned so as to show nothing but what is interesting. And to this end she also begins to drop little hints, little phrases suggestive of that virtue of blameless and long constancy with which it is necessary to invest her cousin Alan, if he is to be made a creature of romance. She even essays these very delicately on the ear of Xenia Sabaroff, but they are met with so absolute a lack of response, so discouraging and cold an absence of all understanding, that she cannot continue to try them in that direction.

"If that odious Blanford were not here!" she thinks, irritably.

The attentions of Blanford are very marked to the Princess Sabaroff, and are characterized by that carelessness of comment and color of romance which have always marked his interest in any woman.

He kissed the hands of Mme. Sabaroff with ardor and reverence; he has known her in her own country. A gleam of amusement comes into his half-shut gray eyes as he recognizes Gervase.

The next morning was Sunday; Usk and Dulcia Waverley are at church with the children and Lady Usk and Nina Curzon.

Blanford strays into the small library, takes down a book, and stretches himself on a couch. He half expects that Mme. Sabaroff will come down before luncheon and also seek a book, as she did last Sunday. He lights a cigarette and waits, lazily watching the peacocks drawing their trains over the velvet turf without. It is a lovely, dewy morning, very fresh and fragrant after rains in the night. He thinks he will persuade her to go for a walk; there is a charming walk near, under deep trees by a little brown brook, full of forget-me-nots.

He hears a step, and looks up; he does not see her, but the Russian secretary, Greger Litroff, always called "Toffy" by his female friends in England.

"Dieu de Dieu! What an institution your English Sunday is!" says Litroff, with a yawn. "I looked out of my window an hour ago and beheld Usk in a tall hat, with his little boy on one side and Lady Waverley on the other, solemnly going to church. How dull! He would not do it in London."

"It is no more ridiculous to go to church in a tall hat than to prostrate yourself and kiss a wooden cross, as you would do if you were at home," says Blanford, contemptuously, eyeing the intruder with irritation.

"That may be," says the secretary, good-humoredly. "We do it from habit, to set an example, not to make a fuss. So I suppose does he."

"Precisely," says Blanford, wondering how he shall get rid of this man.

"And he takes Lady Waverley for an example, too?" asks Litroff with a laugh.

"Religion enjoins us," replies Blanford, curtly "to offer what we have most precious to the Lord."

The secretary laughs again. Mr. Wootton comes in at that instant. He has been away but has returned; the cooks at Surrenden are admirable. Blanford sees his hopes of a tete-a-tete and a walk in the home wood fading farther and farther from view. Mr. Wootton has several telegram papers in his hand.

"All bad news, from all the departments," he remarks.

"There is nothing but bad news," says Blanford. "It is painful to die by dribbles. We shall all be glad when we have got the thing over; seen Windsor burned, London sacked, Ireland admitted to the American union, and Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone crowned at Westminster."

THE UNHUMBLED VALET.

How He Treated the Interference of Lord Stratford.

Some persons have an unbounded admiration for a title. "What's in a name?" means everything to them, and demands devotion. Such a person was Lord Stratford, at one time British ambassador to Turkey. What the worthy gentleman would have said to the school-mate of the Prince of Wales's eldest son when he remarked to young Edward that he "hoped he wouldn't put on too much side," may be inferred from the following incident told by James Henry Skene. The story is found in "With Lord Stratford in the Crimean War."

The Duke of Cambridge, was, at one time, an expected guest of Stratford's. At an early hour the ambassador went, in slippers and dressing-gown, to see if the rooms were in perfect order. He found that the Duke's valet had arrived and was arranging his master's trunks and portmanteaus. Stratford gave some directions how they should be placed. The man left off working and stared at the intruder. "I tell you what it is," he said; "I know how his royal highness likes to have his things arranged better than you do. So you just be off, will you, old fellow?"

Lord Stratford left in a towering passion. Calling one of his attaches, he ordered him to go in and tell the man whom he had addressed in such language. The attache returned with twinkling eyes.

"What did you say?" asked the ambassador.

"I said to him, my lord, that the person he had ventured to address such language to was her majesty's representative to Turkey."

"Ah, quite right. And his answer?"

"He answered, my lord, that he never said you wasn't."

THE BEST MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES.

The best medicine in the world for little ones is the medicine that will promptly cure all their little ills and at the same time can be given the very youngest baby with absolute safety. Such a medicine is Baby's Own Tablets. They never fail to cure the ills of childhood and the mother has the guarantee of a government analyst that they do not contain one particle of injurious drug. Concerning them Mrs. John Robertson, Streetsville, Ont., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for constipation with the very best results. They are indeed a valuable medicine for little ones." The Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Forget-me-nots of fifty years ago; she has always about her the faint old-fashioned perfume of attar of roses, and she wears her soft, fair hair in Raphaelite bands, which in any other woman would look absurd; but her experience has told her that, despite all change in modes and manners, the surest weapons to subdue strong men are still those old-fashioned charms of fragility and of apparent helplessness which made Othello weep when his bridal moon was young above the Venetian waters. Only if she had ever spoken candidly all she knows, which she never by any chance does, she would say that to succeed thus with Othello, or any other male creature, you must be, under all your apparent weakness, tenacious as a magnet and cold as steel. Therein lies the secret of all power; the velvet glove and the iron hand may be an old saying, but it is a truth never old.

The conclusion which she has drawn from Gervase and his fragmentary story has seriously annoyed and shocked his cousin, but on reflection, she decides to adhere to her invariable rule of ignoring all that is equivocal in it, and treat it accordingly.

No one has ever heard Lady Usk admit that there is the slightest impropriety in the relations of any of her guests; it is one of those fictions like the convenient fictions of the law, which are so useful that every one agrees not to dispute their acceptance. She will never know a person who is really compromised. Therefore if there be any soil on the wings of her doves, she shuts her eyes to it, so long as those of the world are shut. She has the agreeable power of never seeing but what she wishes to see, so, although for the moment she has been uncomfortably shocked, she recovers her composure rapidly, and persuades herself that Gervase merely spoke of a passing attachment, perfectly pure. Why should he not marry the object of it? To the mind of Dorothy Usk, that would make everything right. Things may have been wrong once, but that is nobody's business. Xenia Sabaroff is a charming and beautiful woman, and the silver mine beyond the Urals is a very real thing. Lady Usk is not a mercenary, she is even a generous woman; but when English fortunes are so embarrassed as they are in this day, with socialists at the roots, and a Jacquerie tearing at the fruits of them, any solid fortune situated out of England would be of great use to any Englishman occupying a great position.

"We shall all of us have to live abroad before long," she reflects, with visions of Hodge chipping down her palms for fire-wood, and not continue to try them in that direction.

"If that odious Blanford were not here!" she thinks, irritably.

The attentions of Blanford are very marked to the Princess Sabaroff, and are characterized by that carelessness of comment and color of romance which have always marked his interest in any woman. He is not a rival a plaisanter, sne knows; but then she knows, too, that he never is serious in these matters. When she first hears the story of Gervase she heartily wishes that there were any pretense to get rid of Xenia Sabaroff, and hastily wonders what excuse she could make to break up her Surrenden circle. But on reflection she desires as strongly to retain her there; and, as there is to be a child's costume ball on the occasion of the Babe's birthday a fortnight hence, she makes the children entreat their friend to stay for it, and adds her own solicitation to theirs. Mme. Sabaroff hesitates, is inclined to refuse, but at length acquiesces.

Unfortunately Usk, who always to his wife's mind represents the bull in the china-shop with regard to any of her delicate and intricate combinations, insists that Blanford shall not leave either. So the situation remains unchanged, though many guests come and go, some staying two days, some three or four.

Xenia Sabaroff has seen and suffered enough to make her not lightly won or easily impressed. She knows enough of the world to know her own value in it, and she has measured the brutality and inconsistency which may lie under the most polished exterior.

"I am not old yet in years," she says once, "but I am very old in some things. I have no illusions."

"When there is a frost in spring the field flowers die," says Blanford, softly, "but they come again."

"In the fields, perhaps," replies Xenia Sabaroff.

"And in the human heart," says Blanford.

He longs to ask her what have been the relations between her and Gervase which people seem so sure have existed once; he longs to know whether it was the brutality of her husband or the infidelity of any lover which has taught her so early the instability of human happiness.

But he hesitates before any demand, however veiled or delicate, upon her confidence. He has known her such a little while, and he is conscious that she is not a femme facile. It is her greatest fascination for him; though he is credited with holding women lightly, he is a man whose theories of what they ought to be are high and difficult to realize. Each day that he sees her at Surrenden tends to convince him more and more that she does realize them, despite the calumnies which are set floating round her name.

One day, among several new arrivals, a countryman of hers comes down from London, where, being momentarily charge d'affaires of the Russian legation, he has been cursing the heat, the dust, the deserted squares, the empty clubs, the ugly parks, and rushing out of town whenever he can for twenty-four hours, as he now comes to Surrenden from Saturday to Monday. "Come un calicot! Comme un calicot!" he says, piteously. Such are the miseries of the diplomatic service.

THE RACKING PAINS OF RHEUMATISM

Can Only Be Cured Through the Blood--Try Williams' Pink Pills, Which Act Directly
On the Blood.

Rheumatism will rack you just as long as there is acid in the blood to cause rheumatism. That's the whole trouble--acid in the blood. Cold, damp weather may start the pains going but it is not the cause. That is rooted in the blood and can only be cured through the blood. Years ago when medical science did not know as much about the complaint as to-day, rheumatic sufferers were given something to rub on the swollen tender joints. Some people who do not know any better still adhere to the old fashioned way, but it does not cure their rheumatism--and never will.

When the acid is driven from the blood the rheumatism is gone--it's cured. The thing is to get the right medicine to drive the acid out. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured more cases of rheumatism than any other disease except anaemia. They do this because they enrich the blood supply, thus toning up the system to a point where the rheumatic acid is expelled through the natural channels and the trouble disappears. They were intended to do this and they do it thoroughly. Mr. Henry O'Donoghue Viscount, Sask., says: "About four years ago I came here from Scotland for the purpose of taking up land. Even at so recent a date as this the country was quite different from what it is to-day. Then the nearest shack to me was ten miles distant, and the nearest town much further away. In those days homesteading was not all sunshine, and in the spring of 1907 I contracted a severe cold. I had never been sick in my life before, and paid no attention to the cold and almost before I realized it I was down with an attack of pleurisy and as the pains of this trouble began to leave me those of rheumatism set in, and my sufferings were something terrible. Help was sent for, but it did me no good, nor did the medicine given me have any effect, and for five months I was confined to the house. Then one day I had an unexpected visit from my brother who came from Australia, and whom I had not seen for nine years. When he saw my condition he at once urged me to get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as he knew of a number of cases in which they had made marvellous cures in Australia. The result was he went to town and purchased six boxes, and before I had used the last box I was out working with my oxen and am now as healthy as any man in the province. For this I must thank the Pills and my brother's advice, and I strongly recommend the Pills to other rheumatic sufferers."

FOOT-BALLER'S BAD KNEE HEALED.

Zam-Buk Again the Only Cure.

Mr. H. Allinson, of 457 King Street, London, Ont., says: "While a member of the East Kent Division Football Team, and during a rough and exciting game of football, I fell on the hard gravel, sustaining a badly lacerated knee. This required prompt medical attendance, as sand and gravel filled the open wound.

"For several weeks the doctor treated my injury, and it was thought to be well healed over; but no sooner had I begun to move about than the skin broke, and I suffered more than at first. For seven long weeks I was actually laid up. It then developed into a running sore, and I was alarmed for fear the result might be a permanently stiff knee. The doctor's treatment failed to heal the wound, so I applied Zam-Buk.

"It was almost magical in its effect on the sore. The discharging soon ceased. The soreness and pains were banished and perseverance with Zam-Buk made the badly-lacerated knee as good and firm as ever."

FOOL QUESTIONS.

Do you think this weather will last much longer?

What is the jury in that case going to do?

Do you think that dog will bite me?

How old do you think I am?

Whom do you think I met yesterday?

Do you know who's talking? (This over the 'phone.)

He--I shouldn't marry a woman unless she was my exact opposite. She--You'll never find so perfect a being as that.

A Pill That is Prized--There have been many pills put upon the market and pressed upon public attention, but none has endured so long or met with so much favor as Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Widespread use of them has attested their great value, and they need no further advertisement than this. Having firmly established themselves in public esteem, they now rank without a peer in the list of standard vegetable preparations.

MOTHERS SHOULD WATCH CLOSELY

DISEASED KIDNEYS THE CAUSE OF BED-WETTING.

Wellesley young man, permanently cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills, gives the public the benefit of his experience.

Wellesley, Ont., Nov. 7. (Special).—That all diseases of the bladder from bed-wetting to Gravel are the direct results of Kidney Disease, has been proved again and again by Dodd's Kidney Pills. They cure the Kidneys and the Bladder diseases speedily disappear. One of the latest proofs comes in the experience of Mr. George Strebel the well-known harness-maker of this place.

"I was troubled with bed-wetting for many years," Mr. Strebel says. "The doctor could not give me relief and no one knows how I suffered. I tried many medicines, till in January, 1905, reading the experiences of others led me to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Nine boxes cured me so completely that I have never been troubled since."

Mothers should learn that when their children are addicted to bed-wetting it is time to look to the cause. The Kidneys are the cause. Cure the Kidneys by using Dodd's Kidney Pills, and not only stop the bed-wetting, but ward off serious and dangerous diseases in after life.

AUTUMN THE TIME TO PAINT.

Five Reasons Why House Owners Should Not Choose Spring.

The Paint Manufacturers Association of the United States has prepared five reasons for having painting done in the fall:

1. In the fall the surface is thoroughly dry. During the spring a surface which needs repainting is sure to contain moisture and dampness or frost, and it cannot be successfully painted until it has thoroughly dried out.

2. When the wood is dry it absorbs more of the paint; the paint penetrates deeper into the wood, therefore gets a firmer hold on it.

3. Paint cannot be as successfully applied in damp, cloudy or unsettled weather as in warm, sunny weather. In the fall the weather is more settled and uniform and generally warmer; therefore it is an excellent time for painting.

4. A house needs its protecting coat of paint more in the winter months than at any other time. A house in need of painting should never be allowed to go over the winter without this protection.

5. It is easier to keep the winter's moisture and dampness out by applying a coat of paint in the fall, when the surface is dry and receives the oil and pigment so as to protect the surface.

These reasons apply as properly to metal work, whether roof, conductors, eave troughs or flashings, as they do to wood work.

NO CLOCK-WATCHER.

How many clerks measure up to the standard of the young bookkeeper in this story. He was employed in the passenger department of a great railroad. It was just a little before lunch. Some of the clerks were putting on their coats, some leaving for the wash room, some consulting the clock; some were still busy. Suddenly the "boss" entered. He glanced about him, and then approached the young bookkeeper.

"What time is it?" he asked. The young man kept on figuring, and the boss put a hand on his desk and repeated the question.

Instantly the other looked up, surprised to see the chief at his elbow.

"I beg your pardon, were you speaking to me?" he asked.

"Merely inquired the time—that was all," said the other.

The bookkeeper glanced about the room, located the office clock, and said, "It's ten minutes to twelve."

"Thank you," said the general manager and vice-president, and strolled out.

That conversation cost the young bookkeeper his place—in the passenger department—and put him under a higher officer, "on the firing line." Nine years later he was assistant general manager, and while still in the thirties became a general manager, full-fledged.

It is Known Everywhere.—There is not a city, town or hamlet in Canada where Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is not known—wherever introduced it made a foothold for itself and maintained it. Some merchants may suggest some other remedy as equally beneficial. Such recommendations should be received with doubt. There is only one Eclectric Oil, and that is Dr. Thomas'. Take nothing else.

"Dobby seems to be taking much more interest in his music than he did," remarked that youth's uncle. "Oh, yes!" said his mother. "I have no difficulty lately in getting him to practise." "How did you manage it?" "I told him the neighbors complained of the noise, and now I can't keep him away from the piano."

A canary's ears are back of and a little below its eyes. They are not hard to find when one has learned where to look. The Doctor's First Question

"How are your bowels?" This is generally the first question the doctor asks. He knows what a sluggish liver means. He knows what a long list of distressing complaints result from constipation. He knows that headaches, bilious attacks, indigestion, impure blood, and general debility are often promptly relieved by a good liver pill. We wish you would talk with your own doctor about this subject. Ask him at the same time if he approves of Ayer's Pills. Do as he says. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Rolling Cigars.

It is common to hear men complain of poorly made cigars, but it is not always because a cigar is indifferently or badly made that the wrapper curls up and comes off. Much oftener this comes from the cigar having been rolled by a maker's left hand and later smoked from the hand of a right handed man. All cigarmakers must use both hands equally well, and economy both in time and material is the prevailing rule in tobacco factories. When a piece of tobacco is cut for the wrapper it is cut on the bias and rolled from left to right on the filler, and at the same time and by the other hand the remaining pieces are used, being necessarily rolled in the opposite way. For this reason the man who holds a cigar in his right hand, which always gives a few twists during the course of a smoke, rubs the wrapper the wrong way, and easily enough it becomes loosened.—Chicago Tribune.

Magna Charta and the Bill of Rights.

Historically speaking, there is a big difference between the Magna Charta and the bill of rights. The first was obtained by the barons from King John at Runnymede in June, 1215, the other by the lords and commons from the Prince and Princess of Orange in 1688-89.

Magna Charta will ever remain the greatest landmark in the constitutional history of England, but next to the great charter wrong from John by the barons must stand the bill of rights that was so graciously acceded to by King William.—New York American.

The Olfactory Test.

It may appear a whimsical theory that the successful grocery store can be detected by its odors, and yet there is this much truth in it—namely, that the grocery store which greets the nostrils with a certain glorious combination of odors of coffee, tea and spices is almost always a paying investment.—Ideal Grocer.

Secrets of Comfort.

Though sometimes small evils, like invisible insects, inflict pain and a single hair may stop a vast machine, yet the chief secret of comfort lies in not suffering trifles to vex one and in prudently cultivating an undergrowth of small pleasures, since very few great ones, alas, are let on long leases.

Sir Wilfrid's philosophy over the whole bye-election and its features is the sondest one—that the success of the Nationalists was a good thing to happen. It will not only bring to light what disloyalty and social strife is being sown by Bourassa and his lieutenant, but will be the undoing of the Conservative party unless the leader denounces the whole affair and the men who figured in it.

The thermometer had a serious relapse last week, and on Wednesday morning had not energy to rise above zero. Several flocks of geese have passed over the last day or two going south in a hurry. New settlers are still moving south, with no shacks up yet.

The Grand Trunk was worked by the tory party for all it was worth for thirty years, a liberal being hardly able to find a position on the line. Then the C.P.R. came along, and it was worked on the same lines until the company decided, a few years ago, to throw off the thralldom. The truth is that there has been less politics in railway matters in recent years than ever before in the history of the country.

Ottawa Free Press.

One of the tricks by which the Nationalists won the election in Drummond and Arthabaska is told by Le Canada. Two men, armed with large books and many pencils, called at the farmhouses, and, asserting that they were census takers, asked the woman

THE POOR COW MUST GO!

From the records in the office of the Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa, received from members of Cow Testing Associations it appears that in the month of August the average yield of 3,000 cows recorded in Ontario was 776 pounds of milk, 3.4 test, and 26 pounds of fat.

On dividing these cows into two groups, those yielding below that average, and those above, it is found that 1,430 cows give an average of only 658 pounds of milk and 28 pounds of fat.

Thus, had their yield been equal to only the average of all the 3,000 cows, they would each have given 118 pounds of milk more, or a total yield of an extra 158,740 pounds of milk. What a pity they did not!

The second group, those yielding above the average, includes the remaining 1,570 cows which produced 883 pounds of milk, or 107 pounds above the average of the 3,000 cows, and actually 225 pounds of milk above the average of the 1,430 poor cows.

The earnings of the good cows amounted to the huge sum of $4,439.00 more in the one month than the earnings of the poor cows.

This began to open our eyes to the tremendous possibilities of increased revenue from keeping better cows. Why should we remain content with only "average" cows? The poor cow must go.

DUST LAYING AT OWEN SOUND.

The sandy lake shore soil, upon which Owen Sound is located, results in very dusty streets. No matter how much rain falls, or how water is sprinkled on the streets, in an hour thereafter the dust becomes a nuisance and a menace to health. To overcome this, the municipal authorities, early in the spring, experimented with oil, which proved such a success that now all the principal streets in the centre of the town are oiled. These thoroughfares are macadamized and, as a preparation for oiling, are first swept clean, and oil put on immediately after with the sprinkler. The objection at first was that the odor from the crude oil was offensive, but in a day or two this disappeared, and the change for the better to dustless streets was recognized by all. The first application of oil lasted six weeks, and the second application was put on the other day, and what were some of the dustiest streets are now perfectly dustless. The town officials state that it will be an annual saving $2,000 over the old water system, and at the same time give much better results. It did another good thing in banishing mosquitoes, heretofore a great annoyance, none being now in evidence where the streets are oiled.

Indian Humor.

Old Geronimo would scarcely be suspected of humor, and yet on one occasion the medicine chief gave me a sample of it. It was his custom in the later years of his life to watch for the coming of white visitors to Fort Sill or to Miss Adkisson's mission, near by, in order that he might sell beaded canes to them. From the proceeds he was accustomed to purchase certain creature comforts not supplied by the government, but on which he relied for support in his old age. One day I was talking to him about them. One of the tricks by which the Nationalists won the election in Drummond and Arthabaska is told by Le Canada. Two men, armed with large books and many pencils, called at the farmhouses, and, asserting that they were census takers, asked the woman of the house if she had any sons. On her replying that, for instance, she had three, and asking the reason for the question she would be told "You must answer truthfully, Madame. You must give us the age and the christian names of your sons, for you must know that the election which is being held has for its object the ratification of the Naval bill. We have two vessels ready, and as soon as the election is finished, if the electors decide in favor of the navy, it will be naturally from counties favorable to war, that we will recruit the men for the two battleships, which are awaiting to take them across the sea to England."

Calgary Herald.
The fact is a woman stands no more chance of matrimony in Calgary than she does in Montreal. Not in the mind of the observant, who walks the streets and keeps his eyes open. This dogma of wife hunger in the West is one of the last phantoms to be slain.
And if the necessary trouble be taken to acquaint oneself with the facts it will be found as conclusive and satisfying as the indestructible logic of the multiplication tables. In this Odyssey of ours in the west a man may re-miniscently desire once more to see a woman sewing quietly in the lamplight; but he does not marry. This idea of matrimonial riot was sounded from the housetops in England some time ago, and what happened to the adventurous virgins who answered the siren call, and braved the elements of the vastly deep? They are now largely waitresses in restaurants or the acidulated vestals of the seminaries in our midst. The man who cannot get a wife, whether he be farmer or sailor, tinker or tailor, real estate man or banker, without advertising for one, is a poor thing, when the western woods are full of women.

Industrial Canada.
Last year we shipped to the United States, pulpwood to the value of $6-076,628. It was delivered to the mills of United States paper manufacturers and turned into paper, some of which later found its way back to this country at many times its original value.
Canada was denuded of about a million cords of timber, in return for which we got the price of the timber and the wages of the lumbermen, with the local portion of the transportation charges. The big profit, as it was represented in national wealth, the cost of the skilled labor, in turning rough timber into finished paper, went to the United States. In the United States the big mills were established, there the thousands of workmen resided, there the wages were earned and spent. Of what value was that timber to us? Did the farmers of Canada get any benefit from the thousands of workmen who were engaged in the United States in turning it into paper?
Did the trade which such a number of men develop help us to build our railways and support our schools? Wherein did we profit except for the menial wages of hewers of wood for our enterprising neighbors?

Crushing Romance.
"It seems to me," said Battersby,
"that we are knocking nearly all the romance and imagination out of life when we commercialize marriage, for that's about what we are doing. I like the good old way of courting, the way that was the classy thing when knights were bold. I like the idea of galloping across the drawbridge and snatching up the girl of my heart and putting her on the saddle before me and galloping away like mad. Wouldn't that suit you?"
"No, it wouldn't," replied the other man. "The girl of my heart weighs

The white corpuscles of the blood—the Phagocytes, as they are known scientifically—are the policemen or the scavengers of the body.
Not a germ of disease can invade the body anywhere but these white corpuscles get after it. And, if they are strong enough or in sufficient numbers, they devour it.
If they're not strong enough or in sufficient numbers, then the invading army of disease germs triumphs and disease holds the body.
Any preparation that strengthens these white corpuscles or that increases their number, will not only preserve health, but will build up its defences so strongly that contagion or infection are impossible.

We Guarantee to Cure Dyspepsia. If We Fail The Medicine Costs Nothing.

To unquestionably prove to the people that indigestion and dyspepsia can be permanently relieved and that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets will bring about this result, we will furnish the medicine absolutely free if it fails to give satisfaction to any one using it.

The remarkable success of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is due to the high degree of scientific skill used in devising their formula as well as to the care exercised in their manufacture, whereby the well known properties of Bismuth-Subnitrate and Pepsin have been combined with Carminatives and other agents.

Bismuth-Subnitrate and Pepsin are constantly employed and recognized by the entire medical profession as invaluable in the treatment of indigestion and dyspepsia.

The Pepsin used in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is prepared by a process which develops its greatest efficiency. Pepsin supplies to the digestive apparatus one of the most important elements of the digestive fluid, and without it the digestion and assimilation of food are impossible.

The carminatives possess properties which aid in relieving the disturbances and pain caused by undigested food. This perfect combination of these ingredients makes a remedy invaluable for the complete relief of indigestion and dyspepsia.

MOTHER DIED OF CONSUMPTION AND ONE LITTLE GIRL IS NOW AT GRAVENHURST.

A short time ago a woman in the advanced stages of tuberculosis died in her own home. By her death five little ones were left without the care of their mother. There was money enough in the family to make some provision for the care of the children, but it was almost impossible to secure anyone who would render this service, so afraid are many people of this dread disease. A visitor to the home says that time and time again she had found the baby sleeping in her sick mother's bed, and near by food was stored from which the children partook. A sequel is revealed in the fact that to-day one of these five children is a patient in Gravenhurst, and the baby is in the children's ward at the Toronto Free Hospital for Consumptives.

It is for the care of such sufferers as these that the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives has been built. The tax on the accommodation is heavy, and the Trustees have only been able to make the large extensions of the present year by borrowing heavily from the bank. An appeal is now made for funds to help on this work and provide a place where children, such as are referred to here, may find a home with good possibilities of cure.

Contributions may be sent to W. J. Gage, Esq., Chairman Executive Committee, 84 Spadina avenue, or Sec. Treas. National Sanitarium Association, 347 King St. W., Toronto.

The Muskoka Free Hospital accepts patients from any part of the Dominion, and not a single patient has ever been refused.

STEALING A HORSE

A Bold Afghan Robber Who Had a Sense of Humor.

An East Indian officer, writing of life in Peshawar in the early seventies of the last century, relates the following:

The medical officer of my regiment was informed one night that a valuable and favorite Arab steed of his had been stolen. Over the border, gone forever, he never expected to see his horse again, but next day, much to his surprise, there came to him a bearded ruffian riding bare backed the stolen steed.

He confessed that he had taken the animal, but, learning that it was the property of a hakim (physician), had brought it back. The horse had been tethered in line with others, with men, women and children sleeping in the open about them.

"How did you manage it?" asked the doctor.

"If the sahib will give the necessary order," he said, "I will show him."

The entire scene was reproduced, even to the night watchman asleep in a corner. Noiselessly the Afghan crawled toward the Arab, treading snakelike through the prostrate forms to where it was standing at the end of the row. Softly hissing to attract the animal's attention without causing alarm, he gently raised himself with arm extended.

In his open palm were some lumps of goor (native sugar), beloved of horses, and while the Arab was enjoying these the man was caressing him with the other hand, whence suspended a watering bridle taken from his wallet. Quickly this was adjusted, and then, stroking soothingly, the robber passed his hand over the animal's back and down the hind quarters. Swiftly the heel ropes were unhitched, then the head gear released, and with a bound he was astride and away, his right hand backward fung, shouting triumphantly as he passed, "Thus was it done!"

The joke was that he never came back! A double restitution would have been too much of a wrench.

LAPLAND BABIES.

For Their First Few Months They Live In Wicker Baskets.

Little Laplanders spend the first few months of their existence in baskets of wickerwork provided at the top with a conical framework too close for the baby to fall through and yet giving the infant plenty of light and air.

Before commencing her work for the day the Lapp mother places her child in the basket and hangs it on the limb of some nearby tree, occupation being found for the little one by stringing toys under a cord passed across the top of the basket.

Thus provided the child spends the entire day in the open and yet at the same time is guarded from the troubles and dangers of outdoor child life in other countries.

The basket idea curiously parallels the Indian idea of strapping the papoose into a carrying case, but the Lapp baby has the advantage over its Indian fellow in that its limbs are unconfined and a certain amount of liberty of movement is afforded.

The child is carried from place to place in the same basket, the cord by which it is attached to a tree being slung over the shoulder.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—MRS. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

MENTAL DISCORD.

An Uncompromising Enemy to Happiness and to Health.

It is a law that every state of mind, whether good or bad, affects every cell in the system and is outpictured in the body, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. We are thus the arbiters of our fate through our thoughts, emotions and passions.

The time will come when we shall know how to refresh ourselves by mental chemistry—that is, by holding in our minds the antidotes of the things that have wearied us or vexed us, by holding the mental attitude which will neutralize the thought enemies that have thrown our bodies into confusion.

There is nothing so deadly to happiness as mental discord. It paralyzes the thinking ability and destroys the power of concentration and effectiveness.

All diseases and sickness of whatever kind are the outpicturing of some form of discord. If the mind is kept as happy as possible it is difficult for discord to get a foothold in the body. A happy mind is the best possible health producer, disease killer and discord destroyer.

For centuries man's happiness was looked upon by many earnest, thinking people as a condition largely beyond his control. They seemed to think that it depended mostly upon the temperament one happened to develop and that there were other things of so much more importance that we should not consider it too seriously or take precious time to cultivate it directly.

We are beginning to find, however, that even as an economical investment it pays immensely to make a business of being happy and being just as good to ourselves as possible, although not in a selfish way. We could not be good to ourselves in the higher sense by being selfish.

Washington Irving.

To Washington Irving more than to any other writer belongs the high honor of being the "creator of American literature." Irving was not the first American to write good literature, but he was the first American to write in a way to catch and hold the European attention. It was through Irving's writings that the old world was made aware of the fact that there was an American literature. Hildreth, Prescott, Cooper, Poe and others of the pioneers came in for a full measure of praise, but Washington Irving will always hold his title as father of our literature.—New York American.

A LEGAL DILEMMA

Tangle of Red Tape In an English Extradition Case.

GETTING AROUND THE LAW.

Only the Quick Wit of the Canadian Police Inspector Kept a Notorious Criminal In Custody When In Reality He Was as Free as the Air.

The manner in which a prisoner extradited to England from a foreign country is treated while on the voyage home depends very much on the detective who has him in charge and also on whether or no there is any suspicion that he may be contemplating violence either to himself or to others.

For instance, in the case of Jabez Balfour, who was taken to England all the way from Buenos Aires, there was a strong suspicion—probably ill founded—that he contemplated committing suicide. Consequently Inspector Froest, who had him in charge, decided to take no risks that he could possibly avoid.

The regulations do not permit of an unconvicted prisoner being handcuffed on board ship once the vessel has left port, and he must be allowed one hour's exercise on deck each day. These indulgences, if indulgences they may be called, were therefore not withheld from Balfour.

But he got few others. For twenty-three hours out of every twenty-four he was immured in a locked cabin. He was not permitted even to enter the public dining room, his meals being brought to him by Mr. Froest himself after the rest of the passengers had fed. He was, besides, constantly watched and was subjected to a most rigorous search immediately on coming aboard.

His only relaxation was an occasional game of chess with some of the passengers who kindly came to his cabin to play with him by permission and in the presence of his keeper. This sea imprisonment lasted exactly one month and a day, and Balfour afterward declared that it was the most trying experience of a captivity that was destined to continue for nearly twelve years.

One of the longest and in its later stages one of the pleasantest voyages ever undertaken by an unconvicted criminal was that which Charles Hylton Davidson, the notorious forger, made some years back in the custody of Chief Inspector Murray of the Canadian department of justice.

Murray tracked the wanted man to Mexico and secured his extradition to Canada. But then his difficulties began. He could not bring his prisoner to Canada by the direct route through the United States, for immediately Davidson set foot in that country he could have demanded to be released. There was therefore nothing for it but to convey him by way of Jamaica and England and thence back across the Atlantic to Quebec.

On the voyage Murray kept Davidson under close observation, although allowing him considerably more freedom than Froest allowed Balfour. When, however, he had got safely as far as London he was both mortified and astonished at the likelihood of his having had all his trouble for nothing.

The law was, he was told, that a prisoner extradited from a foreign country to a British colony could not be kept in custody in England for

A RUSSIAN SPY.

Trepoff's Ruse to Get at the Plans of the Nihilists.

When the famous General Trepoff was only at the beginning of his career Vera Sassulitch was his invaluable assistant.

Trepoff was the detested enemy of the nihilists, and he was very anxious to obtain inside information as to their doings and plans. Suddenly one day in 1878 he was fired at while driving through the streets of St. Petersburg by no other than Vera Sassulitch. She was at once seized by the soldiery and was charged with the attempted murder of Trepoff, being tried in the ordinary manner; but, to the amazement of the public, she was acquitted!

On her release the nihilists gathered about her, desiring to admit such a friend of the people to their closest acquaintance. In this way she was admitted to all their private circles and was made acquainted with their secrets. These she at once communicated to the Russian government. The truth was that the whole business, including the attempt on his life, was faked by Trepoff himself, and it was simply a clever ruse to get from the nihilists what could not be got in any other way. Thereafter Vera Sassulitch played the part of government spy on innumerable occasions.

far as London was both mortified and astonished at the likelihood of his having had all his trouble for nothing. The law was, he was told, that a prisoner extradited from a foreign country to a British colony could not be kept in custody in England for longer than twenty-four hours, nor could he be taken as a prisoner on board a British ship sailing from a British port.

Here was a dilemma. Davidson was free as air—had he only known it. But Murray was equal to the occasion. "Look here, Davidson," he said, "I've got you safe. There is only the last stage of the journey to complete. If I allow you to travel saloon with me as an ordinary first class passenger will you give me your word to play me no tricks?"

To this proposition Davidson, knowing nothing of the real state of affairs, was naturally quite ready to agree. And so it came to pass that one of the most notorious criminals Canada has ever known came home in state; free, yet not free, a voluntary prisoner, and yet an involuntary one.—Pearson's Weekly.

POET OF MANY VERSES.

An Anecdote of Pellegrin, an Eighteenth Century Bard.

The impecunious French poets of the middle eighteenth century used to consort at the cafes, where sometimes they would pick up customers. One of the worst and at the same time the most facile of the bards was Pellegrin, of whom a characteristic story is told in "An Eighteenth Century Marquise." One day a newcomer entered the cafe and began complaining that he was going to be married and had no epithalamium for his wedding. Pellegrin hastened to offer one of his own compositions. A deal was soon arranged, and the price agreed upon was 20 sous a verse. The poet disappeared. The bridegroom was presently accosted by a stranger, who began a conversation on various subjects and suddenly said:

"By the by, my friend, what price are you paying Pellegrin?"

"Twenty sous a verse."

"H'm."

"Is that too dear?"

"No"—doubtfully—"not if you fixed the length of the poem."

"I never thought of doing that."

"When is he to bring your epithalamium?"

"Tomorrow morning."

"Tomorrow morning!" cried the stranger. "Why, you must be rolling in money!"

"What do you mean?"

"That you will have to pay for at least a thousand verses."

"Oh, what a fraud!" exclaimed the bridegroom and rushed off to find Pellegrin in his attic. The versifier had just completed his hundredth verse.

The most shocking sartorial thing visible in the east is the dinner jacket of white duck affected by the British and, alas, by some expatriated Americans. It is cut very short, barely reaching the suspender buttons, and flares widely in front. High collar and black tie complete the abominable combination. Yet no Briton can eat his evening meal without being thus garbed. White duck "pants," of course, cover the unmentionables. The white suits of Mark Twain and Frank Vanderlip which once excited New York are outdone and quite as a matter of course.—New York World.

Ready Reply of a Ragged Turk to a Scot in Kilts.

During the troubles at Crete in 1897 the Seaforth highlanders were landed to help to restore order. Their advent, dressed in the familiar kilts, created a great sensation, as the natives, who themselves wear a kind of kilt, had never seen British soldiers in such a costume.

An amusing incident occurred one day when a party of Seaforths were marching through a small, wretched looking village. As usual, the inhabitants turned out to stare at the soldiers, and one of the highlanders with a view to raising a laugh among his comrades shouted out to a group of Turks, "Gae hame, ye dirty blackguards, an' scrub yersels."

Imagine his astonishment as well as that of the remainder of the highlanders when a ragged and evil looking Turk shouted back in reply, "Go home yourself, Scottish dog, and cover yourself up!" It was afterward discovered that this Mohammedan had spent several years in London and so learned the language.—From "Anecdotes of Soldiers in Peace and War," by J. H. Settle.

These Famous Life Saving Animals Are Said to Be Mongrels.

Among American tourists in Switzerland there is much rivalry for securing "real" St. Bernards to take home with them. They evidently do not know that the St. Bernards are mongrels. The original St. Bernards saw the light toward the end of the fourteenth century. The mother was a Wallis shepherd dog, the sire a mongrel of a Great Dane and a Spanish mountain mastiff.

In the winter of 1812 nearly all the dogs lost their lives in the snow. In 1816 the last St. Bernard dog died. But a monk of Martigny had a mongrel St. Bernard, and this was crossed with Wallis sheep dogs. The breeding being done in scientific manner, the present race of St. Bernards, though mongrel, like the first, is better and stronger than the old ones, it is said.

The railways have made use of St. Bernards almost unnecessary now, yet they continue on the old stand in winter when the snow lies high. Only the male dogs are used for rescuing men in distress. They are followed by men on snowshoes, who carry provisions. Each of the older dogs has one or more young companions, which he teaches the business.—Boston Post.

Seen in a Dream.

Mr. Hilprecht, professor of Assyriology in the University of Pennsylvania in 1893, when puzzling over sketches of objects excavated at Babylon, learned in a dream the solution to the difficulty that confronted him. Two drawings represented fragments of agate inscribed with characters. They were supposed to be bits of finger rings and, being apparently of different colors, were not closely associated together by the professor. But in a dream he saw an Assyrian priest, who told him how the priests of the Temple of Bel, having received a votive cylinder of agate from their king, were ordered to make earrings for their god. They made three by cutting up the cylinder, and the professor would find by fitting the fragments together that these were two of them. He did this and found that they gave a continuous description.

VICTIMS OF CONSUMPTION.

MOTHER AND TWO CHILDREN AT MUSKOKA FREE HOSPITAL.

Are Now Under Treatment—Husband, Too, Had Been a Patient—A Tragedy in Real Life—Heavy Debt on Institution.

A story from the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives tells of a mother who, with her two children, is now under treatment in that institution. The husband had been a patient, but the case was an advanced one when the patient entered, and he has since passed away. There is little doubt but that the wife was infected as a result of caring for her husband, and now she is in the Muskoka Hospital. Her little girl, about five years of age, and a boy of ten are with her, both being afflicted with this dread disease.

The words of the mother are pathetic. She writes: "I went to a doctor and got him to examine my lungs to see whether there was anything wrong with them, and he said that the right lung was affected. A little rest, he hoped, would build me up. I have a little girl, about five years old, and the doctor says that if I could take her up with me it would do her ever so much good, as she is not very strong. I have three more children, and one of these, a boy of ten, seems also to be afflicted, and it is advisable that he should enter the hospital."

These three are of the 104 patients who are residents in this deserving institution and being cared for without money and without price. The sorry part of it is that the trustees are carrying a debt of something like $40,000, incurred largely through the additions that have been made within the past year, and that have more than doubled the accommodation of the institution, together with the heavy cost of maintaining so large a number of free patients.

Big Opportunity For Farmers

Enormous Profits Offered By Poultrying at Present Time.

It is an interesting and instructive, though possibly not a particularly edifying fact, that the poultry products of this country last year, totalled only $25,000,000 as against $625,000,000 for the United States, in the same period. Such figures as these offer food for thought. Poultrying is very much underdone in Canada at the present time and unless we are going to import eggs and poultry very heavily, our output in the next five years, must increase to ten times what it is to-day. Even now, we are importing eggs from United States, Russia and Germany. Sifting these figures down to their plainest meaning, we are shown that the United States on poultry products is beating us out in the ratio of about three to one per head of population.

This $625,000,000 of poultry products in the United States last year, is more than the products in a similar period of all the farms and ranches of the whole Dominion of Canada, including the live stock, field crops and every thing which was produced on the farms of Canada last year. This is according to the Hon. Sydney Fisher, who places Canadian products at $588,000,000. The poultry products of the United States, surpassed this figure by nearly $50,000,000.

To localize the comparison, it might be said, that the whole Province of Ontario did not produce in all its farm products, a total last year, that was within $17,000 of as much as was produced by the hens in the one single State of Missouri.

In 1902, Canada exported $1,733,242 worth of poultry products. Last year, these figures dropped to but slightly over half a million. In 1904, the Dominion exported to Great Britain, ten times the poultry and eggs that it does to-day.

There are two reasons for this state of affairs. In the first place, the Canadian farmer fails to realize the enormous profit-making possibilities presented by the egg market: in the second place, while he knows the producer's prices are high at the present time, he is afraid that a greater production would cause cold-storage houses and other middlemen to cut these prices down. The farmer does not want to produce unless he is sure that he is going to get full return for his labors. He has seen production increased in other unsupplied market, with this result and he is afraid to produce poultry and eggs in greater quantities lest the price be forced down.

It is very true that the cold-storage houses and middlemen shoulder much of the blame for this lack of supply.

But the farmers are awakening to the fact that there is a real market for poultry products and that this market offers big profits. If they cannot get their prices through the ordinary channels of distribution, they will have to take things into their own hands, and go after the profits in another way. Many of them have done this. The plan by which they have worked, has been taught them by Lee Manufacturing Co., Ltd., of Pembroke, Ont.

This firm realizing the gravity of would otherwise go to the cold-storage houses, make a strong appeal to common sense. We would advise those of our readers who are not already familiar with the full meaning of co-operative raising and marketing, to get in touch with the Lee Manufacturing Co., so that each can start a co-operative circle in his own district.

without price. The sorry part of it is that the trustees are carrying a debt of something like $40,000, incurred largely through the additions that have been made within the past year, and that have more than doubled the accommodation of the institution, together with the heavy cost of maintaining so large a number of free patients.

Oratorical Effects.

I once heard Everett, whose platform oratory was the acme of American art. His language was unimpeachable. But his every word, and not only his every word, but his every gesture, was unmistakably prepared. He seemed to gesticulate not only with his hands, but with his legs. He even planned scenic effects beforehand. Having to deliver a Fourth of July oration, he introduced a veteran of 1812, put him in a conspicuous place and told the old man to rise to him at his entrance into the hall. The old man did as he had been bidden. Everett apostrophized him with "Venerable old man, sit down! It is not for you to rise to us, but for us to rise to you." The veteran said afterward: "Mr. Everett is a strange man. He told me to rise when he came into the hall, and when I did rise he told me to sit down."—From Goldwin Smith's Reminiscences in McClure's.

The Lightning Rod.

Though Franklin will continue to receive the honor that is his due as the inventor of the first practical lightning rod, the study of atmospheric electricity goes back at least to the time of Tullius Hostilius, who perished in an attempt to "draw fire from the sky." A learned priest of the name of Divisch is said to have erected the first lightning conductor in Europe. He set it up at Preditz, Bohemia, in 1754, and it was 130 feet high. Though the Emperor Stephen and the Empress Maria Theresa publicly proclaimed their confidence in the inventor, a most disastrous drought that afflicted the country a year later was ascribed by the superstitious populace to the newfangled device, and Divisch was compelled to take it down. It is not probable that Franklin was acquainted with Divisch's experiment.

Wrong End of the Milk.

One morning while trade was slack and he had settled himself in the store chair for a few minutes a north side grocer was interrupted by the entering of a very small daughter of Africa, who, bracing herself in the middle of the store, said, "Mam wants some scum milk," whereupon she received the asked for amount of skimmed milk.

The grocer had just settled himself for another rest when he was again interrupted by that selfsame bottle of ink: "Mam don't want this. She want that what's skimmed off the top."

Poetic Justice.

"Pa, I've just been reading about poetic justice. What does that mean?" "Listen, my child, and you shall hear. Once there was a man who swindled me out of a lot of money in an irrigation scheme. Well, he became a victim of poetic justice. I have just heard that he died of water on the brain."—Judge.

not get their prices through the ordinary channels of distribution, they will have to take things into their own hands, and go after the profits in another way. Many of them have done this. The plan by which they have worked, has been taught them by Lee Manufacturing Co., Ltd., of Pembroke, Ont.

This firm, realizing the gravity of the situation, has sent its experts to Denmark, Sweden and other foreign countries and studied co-operative circles and the co-operative marketing methods in use there. Revising these plans to make applicable to this country, they have put the methods into successful operation with their 15,000 co-workers scattered throughout the Dominion. That the lines along which they are working, are right, is best attested by the success of these 15,000 poultrymen.

It looks very much as if co-operation among farmers and team-work in marketing, were to be the ultimate solution of the Canadian poultry problem. The idea of the farmers getting together to do their marketing and taking for themselves the profits, that

VERY IMPORTANT MATTER

The Only Creed Worth Contending for Is That Which Affects Character

"Faith is assurance of things hoped for, a conviction of things not seen."—Heb. xi. 1.

Half the creeds are not creeds at all; they are but the empty forms of lifeless metaphysical systems. Their recitation is the rattling of verbal skeletons. A true creed is more than an explanation; it is a great compelling affirmation. It cannot lie inert while the logicians quarrel over it; it surges and burns in the heart until men live by it and die for it.

A living creed looks forward rather than back; it paints the future instead of analysing the past. It has to do, not with mysteries and abstractions, but with that which gives reality, meaning, and sufficient motive to my world as it is and to life as I must live it.

Your creed is not in the words you say on Sunday; it is in what you really believe about life; it is discovered in the motives that compel you, in the hopes that inspire you, in the aims at which you strike, in the confidences that are axiomatic to you.

To believe that the world was made in either six days or in immeasurable aeons is not in itself a part of a creed. But to believe that you are to-day having a share in making the world, to believe that whether it shall be what it might be is your own responsibility, means the subjection of life to such a great conception, means laying hold on a confidence that gives every act

NEW SIGNIFICANCE.

It is passing strange how even good men continue to fight over the definitions and descriptions in their creeds and slight their splendid affirmations. They recite their belief in the God who is Father Almighty, maker of heaven and earth, and forget the beauty and richness of the thought of the Great Father in their bitter disagreements as to how he made the earth.

Your belief is to be known by the meaning it gives to life, by the values it puts into your living, by whether it is a great, glowing confidence and passion that will not die down, that stirs you up to noble deeds, to patient endeavor, to true love and helpful living.

After all men do not recite their creeds in the churches; they write them on their own lives and on the minds of their fellows through the every day living of home and shop and store.

Because we believe in love we sacrifice in the home and toil at the bench. Because we believe in a better world we go on making our investments of means and strength in efforts for the clean city, the honorable state; schools, churches, parks, and all that minister to the higher life are the words of our creed that man has within him the possibility of higher living.

It is a light and trivial matter what you may believe about the days of creation or the ways of whales with men; it is a deep and eternally important matter what you hold as to whether life is a game where cunning and deceit win or this is a great chance to find ourselves in a world where truth and right, love and honor, the elements of personality and character, are set above all things, where the great love that is law and the law that is love ever reigns.

Let the descriptive elements of the ancient creeds go; cling to the great confidences that have guided and inspired the world's leaders. There is a faith to live by in the confidence of the man of Nazareth that he could better afford to die than to deny himself, to be disloyal to the great purpose that glorified his days, the mission of making men see God as eternally good and life as essentially love.

Build up within the faith that looks forward, the creed that augments your confidence in the harmony of the universe, the goodness and justice of the infinite, the worth of life and the joy of love, the creed that compels me to lose my old self, to leave my old ways and to step out into a wider world and breathe purer air, the creed that outgrows itself in higher, clearer vision.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON,
DEC. 4.

Lesson X.—Peter's Denial, Matt.
26. 31-35, 69-75. Golden Text, I. Cor. 10. 12.

Verse 31. Then—It was, according to Matthew's account, and Mark's also, just after the dramatic scene in the upper room, and the minds of the disciples must have been filled with the amazing declaration of the Master that one of them should betray him. Now comes the even more definite statement that on this very night they tricked into one falsehood, he must now hedge himself in with another and more emphatic repudiation of any connection with Jesus.

73. They that stood by—A group of servants and officers, who were warming themselves at a fire. Peter's part in the skirmish in the garden seems to have been the thing which led to his detection now (John 18. 26).

74. To curse and to swear—Was it a revival of "the habit of his old fisher days, dormant these three years"?

75. He went out—It had happened, as Luke tells us, that at this moment Jesus was being led from the judgment chamber of the high priest out into the court, and he heard the imprecations and last denial of Peter. So it was the look which Jesus gave him, as well as the simultaneous crowing of the cock,

HOME

CAKE.

Nut Ginger Cake.—Sift three-quarters of a pound of flour into a basin; add one cupful of chopped walnut meats, one-half a tablespoonful of salt, one-half a teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of ground ginger, one teaspoonful of ground cinnamon and a little grated nutmeg; melt together in a saucepan one cupful of molasses, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, four tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half cupful of milk. Let cool and add the dry ingredients with two well beaten eggs. Mix well, then pour into a butter and floured cake tin; bake in a moderate oven three-quarters of an hour.

Holiday Nut Cake.—Beat to a cream one cup of butter and two of powdered sugar. Whip light three egg yolks and stir into this one-half cup of milk. Have ready two cups of flour sifted twice, with one teaspoon of baking powder, and stir this in alternately with the whipped whites of eggs. Add more flour if necessary to make the dough firm enough to roll out easily. Have it just stiff enough to be handled without sticking to the hands. In a dish have a cupful of chopped nutmeats, hickory nuts, pecans, or English walnuts. Sprinkle the nuts with powdered sugar. Roll the dough thin, strew liberally with the minced nuts, and lay another thin sheet of dough over the upper sheet, and cut into rounds; sprinkle with sugar and place in a pan. Bake in a quick oven, covered, for fifteen minutes, then brown lightly. These cakes improve with age and are ready for all holiday occasions.

Prize Angel Food.—Nine large eggs, whites, one and one-fourth cups granulated sugar, one-half cup flour, one-fourth cup cornstarch, one teaspoon cream tartar, pinch of baking powder, and salt. Sift sugar, four times, then measure. Sift flour four times, then measure. Mix flour and cornstarch and cream tartar and baking powder and sift. Beat whites of eggs to stiff froth; fold in sugar and flavoring. Lastly fold in sifted flour and cornstarch. Bake in moderate oven forty minutes in any ungreased pan. This makes a cake that will melt in your mouth. Measuring cup should hold one-half pint. If you wish to pour anything boiling hot into glass set the glass on a wet cloth and it will never break. Yolks of egg can be kept from getting a crust over the top by greasing a cloth with lard and spreading over top of bowl.

Fudge Cake.—Cream together one cupful of sugar and two-thirds of a cupful of butter; add one cupful of milk. Stir in lightly two and one-half cupfuls of flour, into which one heaping spoonful of baking powder has been sifted. Then stir in one-fourth cupful of melted chocolate. Add one-half cup of English walnuts, broken up coarsely, and lastly three eggs, beaten separately. For the fudge frosting use one and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter and one-half cupful of unsweetened powdered cocoa, one and one-fourth cupfuls of confectioners' sugar, a few grains of salt, and one-fourth cupful of milk. Heat to boiling point and boil eight minutes. Remove from fire and beat until creamy. Add one-half teaspoonful using these new home dyes very weak—say about an eighth of a package to about five gallons of water.

It is not alone to "wearing apparel," that these improved home dyes lend their services. Portiers, couch covers, table covers, shade curtains, draperies, or in fact anything that is made of cloth can be made to look just like new.

Never try to color anything a lighter shade than the article is originally. White or very light colored goods can be dyed any darker shades or any color.

Just as soon as you have decided what you are going to dye, you will want to know how much you will require. For the lighter shades, and for small articles such as ribbons, silk or cotton gloves, stockings, blouses, etc., one package as a rule will be sufficient. For heavy suits, coats, curtains, etc., it is best if possible to weigh your goods before they are wet and use a package to about a pound of goods.

USEFUL HINTS.

The best way of taking castor oil is to float it on milk and before and after taking it, eat a piece of lemon.

If onions are placed in water ten minutes before the peeling, they will not then cause the eyes to smart.

A pinch of borax stirred into fresh milk will keep it for some time and also prevent the cream going sour.

A medical authority says carrots, raw and cooked, are invaluable as a food, for carrots make good red blood.

An icebox may not have typhoid fever itself if it is filled with germs, but the family will, and that is expensive.

Turpentine will take dried paint from glass, and turpentine and soap will remove fresh paint from almost any fabric.

Soda and ammonia softens the water for all purposes; use soda freely to cleanse all milk vessels, and especially infants' nursing bottles.

When making washing frocks, lay a piece of narrow tape on the back seam of the skirt before stitching it. This will prevent its stretching out of shape at the laundry.

Silver-plated ware is kept quite bright by being merely breathed upon and polished. Metal polishes soon wear away the silver-plating.

To prevent cooking odors—Fill a tin cup with vinegar and place it on the back of the stove. This will prevent the spreading of cooking odors throughout the house.

In order to preserve cut flowers, cut the stalks and put them in a vase or glass holder in water, to which you have first added a pinch of salt.

A dish of charcoal should stand in the larder all the year round. This will keep the meat sweet and fresh. Renew the charcoal from time to time.

The upper leather of old boots makes capital iron-holders, with a covering of serge or any other dress material. The leather keeps all heat from the hand.

To remove the fat from sauces, draw the sauce on to the side of the stove, put a few drops of cold water into it, and the fat can then be easily removed.

When boiling a pudding in a cloth, don't forget to put a plate at the bottom of the saucepan, to

Verse 31. Then—It was, according to Matthew's account, and Mark's also, just after the dramatic scene in the upper room, and the minds of the disciples must have been filled with the amazing declaration of the Master that one of them should betray him. Now comes the even more definite statement that on this very night they all were to be offended (that is, made to stumble) because of him. This was simply in accord, Jesus explained, with the ancient words of Zechariah (13. 7) to the effect that the sheep would no longer hold together in the flock when God should smite the shepherd, but they would be scattered. It was not said as a rebuke to their cowardice, but because now at the end, more than ever before, they seemed to him like sheep without a shepherd, and he pitied them. So, lest despair should overtake them at the dread announcement, he proceeds to reassure them with the hopeful promise of the next verse.

32. I will go before you—At the close of the passover they would naturally turn back to their homes in Galilee. Besides, events to follow were to make Jerusalem an insecure place for them to remain. So they were to be scattered, but, when they had returned to the old haunts, they would find that Jesus had gotten there ahead of them.

33. But Peter—In his headstrong, self-reliant way answering for the rest, and vigorously protesting that, for himself, he will never be offended. He takes no account whatever of the promised resurrection and meeting in Galilee. His impetuosity leads him to contradict his Master, to assume a superiority to all his comrades, and to claim for himself an invincible self-sufficiency.

34. Jesus, introducing his assertion with the strong Verily I say unto thee, is equally emphatic. He reiterates that on that very night Peter will be one of those to be offended in him. This is enforced with the addition, before the cock crow, which is an expression for the approach of dawn of day. All the Gospels agree that there are to be three denials, although there is some confusion as to just the form in which Jesus made this declaration to Peter.

35. Even—Matthew's way of saying what Mark expresses with the words "exceeding vehemently" (14. 31). There can be no question about the courage of the man who drew his sword in his Master's defence in the garden, and afterward dared to proceed to the palace of the man whose servant he had smitten. He was the kind to follow Jesus to the death. In fact, all the disciples entered the same protest.

36. Peter was sitting without in the court—Compare John 18. This was at the high priest's house, within which the trial of Jesus before the Jewish authorities was taking place. The court was beneath (Mark 14, 66) the audience chamber into which Peter would be unable to gain admission.

A maid—Elsewhere we learn she was the portress. How she identified Peter as one of the companions of the Galilean we cannot tell. The accounts agree only in the larger fact of his repeated denials, and are full of differences in the matter of detail. As John was actually present, his version of what took place should be studied carefully.

72. Denied with an oath—Perhaps he felt that, having been fisher days, dormant these three years'?

75. He went out—It had happened, as Luke tells us, that at this moment Jesus was being led from the judgment chamber of the high priest out into the court, and he heard the imprecations and last denial of Peter. So it was the look which Jesus gave him, as well as the simultaneous crowing of the cock, that made the disciple hurry away weeping bitterly. It is this sincere repentance on the part of Peter by which we must measure his guilt. It proves to us that his love for the Master had not really changed. His blindness was the result of what appear to be worthy enough motives. He may have wished merely to keep near Jesus, and denied the right of anyone connected with the enemies of his Master to know his identity. He lied first to avoid being thrown out, and then a second time to cover up a falsehood which, if discovered, would surely lead to his ejection, and still a third time simply to keep up his dogged determination to see the affair through to the end. Of course, there is no defending his conduct. But it was not the conduct of a craven and faithless disciple.

A GIRL ATHLETE.

Champion Swimmer, Runner and Ball Thrower.

Miss Margaret A. Graham, of Ludlow, Mass., who is only nineteen years old, is one of the foremost girl athletes in the world, and by many believed to be the strongest. She holds the world's record for women throwing the baseball, 262 feet 6 inches; the world's record for women skating a half-mile, time, one minute, 40 seconds; has smashed all women's skating records from one-quarter mile to ten miles; swam 100 feet in 23 seconds, and has done 100 yards dash in skirts in 11-12 seconds.

Though only nineteen years old, she stands six feet three and three-quarter inches, without shoes, and weighs 189 pounds. She is splendidly proportioned for feats demanding strength and skill, and has no superfluous flesh.

From her youngest childhood she has lived a great deal out of doors, and has been constantly active in sports of all kinds. As a result she has never been ill a day, and is the picture of health and happiness.

She was born in the little village of Ludlow, and all her life has lived close to the mill, where she is employed as a reeler. She attended Public School, and at seven years of age took up regular gymnastic work under the guidance of an instructor. She is a member of the Stevens Memorial Institute and has competed in hundreds of athletic events, and has never been surpassed by a competitor.

"I do not care for applause," she said recently. "I go into the athletic field solely for the pleasure it affords me. I do not have a preference for any special diet. Plain, wholesome food is all that is desired to enable any girl to do her best in athletics."

Difficulties give reality to life. You cannot put on new life without putting off the old.

It is no use preaching on the fatherhood of God so long as you do not like boys.

The world will always be indifferent to the churches that emphasize their differences.

lastly three eggs, beaten separately. For the fudge frosting use one and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter and one-half cupful of unsweetened powdered cocoa, one and one-fourth cupfuls of confectioners' sugar, a few grains of salt, and one-fourth cupful of milk. Heat to boiling point and boil eight minutes. Remove from fire and beat until creamy. Add one-half teaspoonful of vanilla and then pour over cake to depth of one-quarter inch.

SANDWICHES.

Bacon Sandwiches.—Make bacon sandwiches for the lunch box. Take newly baked bread spread with fresh butter and a little cut parsley. Fry long strips of bacon till seared and lay between the buttered slices, allowing the ends to protrude on each side of the sandwich.

Harlequin Sandwiches.—Take two slices of white bread and one of whole wheat bread, trim off the crust, spread one slice of white bread with just a little butter, then with cream cheese and mixed with finely chopped olives, then butter the slice of brown bread in the same way and spread with finely chopped pecan nut meats mixed with mayonnaise dressing. Simply butter the other slice of white bread, arrange with the slice of brown bread in the center; press firmly together; cut in small pieces and serve.

Mosaic Sandwiches.—Cut three slices each of white and graham bread half an inch in thickness. Spread a slice of white bread with butter and any sandwich mixture made into a paste, and place a slice of graham on it, spreading this with the mixture and another slice of white bread. Repeat this process, beginning with graham. Put both piles in a cool place under a light weight. Remove weight and cut slices one-half inch thick, making three slices of each pile. Spread these slices with sandwich mixture and put together so that a white block alternates with a graham. Place again under light weight, remove weight, cut in thin slices and arrange on plate.

HOME DYEING.

Has it ever occurred to you what a large number of things one can dye at home, and in that way make quite a saving?

When on shopping expeditions, you have often noticed on the "Bargain Counters," remnants offered at ridiculously low prices. The reason for these low prices, was not by any means on account of the materials being of poor quality, but because the shades or colors were out of style; the materials often being of superior quality.

Now, these bargains could be taken advantage of, and by dyeing the goods, the colors could be changed to the most delicate shade of any of the fashionable colors popular at the time. And remember that it doesn't make the slightest difference whether the goods are wool, cotton, silk or mixed, as there are home dyes now that with the same dye, one can color cloth of any kind perfectly.

You may, possibly have a dress that is hardly worn at all, but is out of fashion as to color and style. Here again, these single home dyes step in to help things out. Rip it up, dye it a fashionable shade, and with new patterns make it up into a most stylish gown that will be the envy of your lady friends.

White summer dresses can be dyed delicate shades of any color by covering of serge or any other dress material. The leather keeps all heat from the hand.

To remove the fat from sauces, draw the sauce on to the side of the stove, put a few drops of cold water into it, and the fat can then be easily removed.

When boiling a pudding in a cloth, don't forget to put a plate at the bottom of the saucepan, to prevent the bottom sticking to the pan.

SLUMP IN IRISH WHISKEY.

Big Drop in Exports Under the New Tax.

Striking figures as to the effect of last year's budget on the Irish whiskey trade were submitted the other day at a meeting of the Dublin Licensed Grocers' and Vinters' Association. They amply justify the forebodings to which expression was given when the extra duty of 3s. 6d. was imposed. Briefly they show that while the higher tax was in force for only eight months of 1909, the export of whiskey from Ireland for the calendar year declined in value by something like a fourth as compared with the average for the previous five years. For the period 1904-8 the average export exceeded 8,000,000 proof gallons, and the annual value, free of duty, was over £2,000,000.

The actual figures for 1908 were 8,108,157 gallons, valued at £2,195,958. In 1909, during four months of which the old duty was in force, the quantity exported amounted to only 6,156,523 gallons, valued at £1,667,392, or a decrease in quantity as compared with 1908 of 1,951,634 gallons, and in value of £528,567. This, it was stated, was the actual loss which the country had sustained, and there is, of course, no reason to anticipate a better state of things for the year 1910.

THE QUEEN'S OWN.

There can be no doubt that the loyalty of many a British subject is strengthened by such incidents as the one recently recounted in the London Athenaeum. One day, toward the end of Queen Victoria's life, the queen was passing through a naval hospital, and paused at the bedside of a dying sailor. With tears in her eyes, she asked him if she could do anything for him.

"No, your Majesty," was the reply. "I am past that; but will you thank the nurse who has been so kind to me?"

Upon the instant her majesty turned to the watching nurse, and raising her voice, that all the ward might hear, said, "I thank you very much for your kindness to my son."

SENTENCE SERMONS.

A truly good piece of work is always a piece of good work.

Nothing enlarges the life like letting the heart go out to others.

The wise know better than to try to live on the spice of life alone.

Many reformers would go out to shoot gophers with a brass band.

When a man seals up his head he is apt to think he is holding the fort.

Nothing chloroforms a church quicker than a minister dosed with dignity.

The man who finds fault with the decalog has usually barked his shins on it.

THINGS PEOPLE EAT

WORMS, SKUNKS WOOD-CHUCK, AND GRASS-HOPPERS.

Devil Fish, Sea Weeds and Sea Shells—Birds' Nests and Sharks' Fins.

Few people are aware that muskrats are good to eat, and still more rare is the man who eats skunk, yet both of these animals are excellent if properly cooked.

Pork is an important article of food with Anglo-Saxon and Teutonic peoples, and yet there are whole races which regard it as absolutely unfit for human consumption. The American Indians eat many things which seem strange to the white man, among them being snakes, lizards and grasshoppers.

Snakes are not at all bad, once people can overcome their natural prejudice, and lizards are eaten in many parts of the world. Grasshoppers are said to make excellent soup, to be good fried or roasted, and many Indian tribes dry them and grind them into flour.

DRIED CRICKETS.

Crickets are also dried and ground into meal by Oregon and Californian Indians, and ants are used to a large extent as food by Indians and African tribes. The Samoan Islanders are very fond of a species of marine worm which appears periodically at their islands, and the natives leave all other occupations to gather the harvest of worms.

In Japan ferns of several kinds are eaten to a great extent, while burdock is raised extensively for the tuberous roots, and sea weeds of various kinds form an important article of diet. On the American coast there are numerous edible sea weeds, but few people are aware that they are edible and nutritious. In fact the value of sea animals and plants as food is little known, and many a white man would starve to death where an Asiatic or South Sea Islander would find abundant food if cast away on an oceanic island.

SEA CUCUMBERS.

Crabs, shrimps, sea shells, in fact nearly every marine creature is edible, while the gigantic holothurians, or "sea cucumbers," so abundant in many tropical seas, are considered a great delicacy by many races, and the industry of gathering, drying and shipping these is very important in Malasian and Australian waters.

Dried and prepared for market these creatures are known as beche-de-mer and bring a good price in the Japanese, Chinese, Greek and Southern European markets. The octopus or devil fish is also eaten extensively in China, Japan, Greece and the West Indies, and when this repulsive-looking creature is pounded into a pulp and made into soup it is really excellent.

In the West Indies the natives are very fond of the great tree lizards, known as iguanas. These creatures often grow to five or six feet in length and the meat is white, tender and flavored much like a chicken. In the West Indies there is a native land frog which is considered a delicacy by

HOLDING TWO LIONS AT BAY.

A Music-Hall Singer's Exciting Experience.

Stage fright of the sort that afflicted "Whit" Cunliffe, at one time a prominent singer in English music-halls, is not avoidable. Fortunately, also, it is not common. At a place where he was engaged in Birmingham, says a writer in Scraps, one of the attractions was a lion show, some of the beasts being really wild and untamed. Nearly the whole stage was taken up with the "setting"—the animal show.

"Just as I was going on," said Cunliffe, in telling the incident, "I heard a hurried rush and confused shouting, and someone slammed an iron gate. I heard a voice say, 'Just in time; he was nearly out.' My music was starting, so I had no time to inquire. I went on the stage.

"In a moment I heard ominous growls and savage snarls mixed with much whip-cracking and strenuous breathing. I am never fond of a wild animal show, and I felt distinctly nervous that night. The cloth behind me sagged and swayed—and then, to my horror, suddenly in the wings I saw the huge head and front of a lion!

"I was singing a song called 'I Would,' which had a lot of short verses. As I sang them, my blood running cold, I watched the lion. It seemed slowly to advance, and its baneful eyes glittered in a truly horrible way. I could not go off that side without passing it, so I prepared to 'exit' with haste. 'Turning, I was doubly horrified to see another lion on the other side!

"I was caught like a mouse in a trap. I dared not go off the stage; I dared not show my discomfiture to the audience. There was only one thing for me to do—sing. So I sang in desperation, hoping that someone would come and take those lions away. They told me afterward that I sang ninety-eight verses! But I think that was unkind.

"I wondered how long it would take those two brutes to make up their minds to come into the full glare of the footlights, and I had just prepared to leap into the stalls, regardless of the consequences, when I heard the hoarse voice of one of the stage-hands say:

"'Ere, Bill, these two chaps are two far forward. Give a 'and with them, will yer!' And coming up between the two lions they lifted them bodily. They were paper mache."

CATS CAUSE OF DISEASE.

House Pets Carry Contagion from Their Plebeian Friends.

The United States Bureau of Agriculture have the domestic cat in their black books. Pussy is a menace to public health, say they, and of precious little use in any respect. Dr. A. K. Fisher, of the bureau, a recognized authority on the house cat, says:

"The highly-pampered pet cat of the luxurious household never fails to get out and roam around with the ordinary alley cat. In many instances the alley cat, which prowls all night long with the pet cat, has spent the day sleeping in some hut or hovel in an alley where smallpox, diphtheria or tuberculosis is hid. This disease is transmitted from one cat to another.

BURGLARIOUS ENTRY.

A Police Commissioner's Adventure in London.

Not only to readers of the achievements of the marvellous Mr. Sherlock Holmes, but to all who know anything of the useful if less sensational performances of the London police detectives in their constant warfare with crime, Scotland Yard has long stood as a name of terror to criminals. It is easy to understand, therefore, the mischievous glee with which Sir Robert Anderson, long assistant police commissioner, confesses after long silence his share in a mysterious case of burglarious entry.

He was living at the time with Charles Reade, the novelist, and on reaching home one night very late, found that he had forgotten his latch-key.

"Unable to rouse the inmates," he relates, "I decided to enter burglariously. My experiences of criminal courts had given me a theoretical knowledge of the business, and it was with a light heart that I dropped into the area and attacked the kitchen window. Of course I had no fear of the police. Neither had I any cause to dread a pistol-shot in entering the house.

"But the kitchen window refused to yield, and such was the effect of spending twenty minutes in that area that the sound of a constable's tread in the garden made me retreat to the coal cellar. I felt then that my case was desperate. There being no steps to the area, escape was impossible, and a new bolt on the window baffled me. There was nothing for it—I was driven to break the glass. It is extraordinary what a noise it makes to smash a pane of glass when one does it deliberately!

"To my horror, it was so great that passers-by were attracted by the sound. Luckily for me they had no bull's-eye lantern to flash into the area, and as I had again taken refuge in the coal cellar, they could see nothing to account for the noise. As soon as they were gone, it was the work of a moment for me to shoot the bolt, open the window, and scramble into the house.

"The next morning the police were sent for, and the detectives investigated the crime. The broken glass and the finger marks gave proof of a felonious entry; but nothing was disturbed and nothing stolen. The case was most mysterious, and it passed into the statistics as an 'undetected burglary.'

"I need hardly add that when I afterward told Charles Reade, the novelist's delight was unbounded."

LATEST THING IN WHEAT.

Three Thousand Grains Gathered From One Seed.

A remarkable story of a single grain of wheat comes from a Daily Mail correspondent at South Honchurch, Essex, England. Seventy ears of wheat containing in all nearly three thousand grains is the astonishing harvest gathered from this one seed, and the owner of the wonderful crop is a Mrs. Gentry, who was following out a three-year-old Russian wheat planting experiment.

It will be remembered that General Levitsky, the author of the experiment, sowed a single grain of wheat in a conical pit about eight-

Survivors of the Light Brigade
Dine on 56th Anniversary of Balaclava.

On the 25th of October, 1854, occurred the most important and gallant feat of arms of modern times, when the British Light Cavalry Brigade, 670 men of all ranks, charged General Liprandi's 12,000 Russians, and left more than two-thirds of their numbers on the field. In this minute analysis of that awful yet glorious event, the historical Kinglake rates Lord Cardigan, commander of the "Light Brigade," as what in present day slang would be termed a "bone-head." It would seem as if he put the most improbable interpretation on the ambiguous verbal orders carried to him by the unfortunate aide, Captain Nolan, from Lord Lucan, commander of all British mounted troops. Yet, can any military critic explain what it was the intention to do with Cardigan's little force, or why it was drawn up within range of the Russian batteries, for Nolan was killed by a shell almost immediately after he had delivered the order.

SURVIVORS OF THAT DAY,

Of the people who walked this earth 56 years ago, perhaps 15,000 in every million are alive to-day; of the population of Canada, as it was at the time the news of Inkerman and Sebastopol reached here, it is impossible there are still 600 surviving; and of the 200 troops of the Light Brigade who came "back from the mouth of hell," 27 or 28 old and broken men, some crippled, paralyzed or bedridden, remain to celebrate in one way or another, the day on which they became famous.

The Saturday before the anniversary this year, twenty-one survivors were present at a benefit matinee at the Anambra, when $750 was raised. On the day itself, fourteen of them dined at the Holborn Restaurant in London. Lord Cardigan, nephew of the man who led them "right through the guns," presided and read the following Royal message:—

"The King and Queen thank the survivors of the Balaclava Light Brigade for their kind message, and trust that those who are celebrating that event of undying fame will enjoy a happy anniversary."

TWO OF THE HEROES.

The veteran of the party, Sergeant-Major Hughes, of the 13th Light Dragoons, a spare man, with upright carriage, who looked well under his eighty years, had travelled all the way from Blackpool in order to be present. His cheek still bears the deep scar of a sword cut received in the mad, onward rush. "I was lucky to get nothing worse," he said, "my horse was shot under me and rolled over, crushing my left leg. But that was nothing. It was not bad enough for hospital, anyway. In those days one could not get there unless one had at least a leg off!"

Another notable hero present was Mr. W. H. Pennington, of the 11th Hussars, famous as being the SNAILS AND SLUGS.

The French and Italians consider snails and slugs as dainties of the highest order, while pickled earth worms are a common relish in Southern Europe and Asia.

In New Zealand there occurs a grub which lives in the earth and which is often affected by a fungous growth that springs from the grub's neck and pushes upward to the surface of the earth. These worm-grown mushrooms are gathered and eaten, and are said to be very delicious when properly cooked.

Doubtless many other insects are edible, and the Chinese even devour the chrysalids of the silkworm after the silk is unwound from the cocoon. They are fried in butter, with the yoke of an egg added, and are said to be very fine.

BAMBOO SHOOTS.

Many vegetables are eaten by various races that seem strange to us. Bamboo shoots taste like asparagus; acorns and pine nuts are made into flour and meal; cattail pollen is used in cake making by Californian Indians; water lily pods are harvested in the Upper Mississippi Valley, and clover, grape seeds and sunflower seeds are used in the same way.

In many parts of the American tropics the natives gather the leaf bud of the royal palm and this great, white, smooth, cylindrical mass is sold as mountain cabbage and is cooked in a variety of ways. Stewed, fried or roasted it is splendid, and eaten raw it tastes like fresh, crisp celery. For each bud gathered a magnificent tree is destroyed, and in many places one may see dozens of the towering dead trunks that once bore crowns of glossy green leaves, but which have been sacrificed for a few cents worth of the mountain cabbage.

SHARK'S FINS.

Of course there are sharks' fin soup, edible birds' nests and other Chinese luxuries, and no doubt you may have read of eating monkeys in South America. Armadillos baked in their own shells, whale and porpoise steaks and alligator tadis are well known and esteemed tropical viands, but it is only in a few localities that one may sample flying fish cutlets and sea eggs.

Barbadoes and the neighboring Antilles are the headquarters for both of these delicacies, and while the former is one of the finest of edible fish, as much cannot be said of the latter. The sea egg is in reality a large species of sea urchin and is used for the table when filled with roe or immature eggs. They are mushy, unappetizing objects and taste much like sandy soup flavored with fish.

This disease is transmitted from one cat to another, and thus carried into homes where everything but the pet cat is sanitary.

"I can state from my personal observation that only about five per cent. of cats are really mousers. As a matter of fact, they prefer birds to mice. Little harm would be done if the whole cat tribe were exterminated, but there would be too much opposition to that. Still, when some of the facts concerning cats are known to the public, many mothers will be more careful about allowing their children to play with cats."

HOMES WITHOUT KITCHENS.

Progressive New Buildings in Suburbs of London.

Homes without kitchens—progressive homes—are to be built in the London suburbs. The idea of the architect is to form a co-operative system, so that more leisure will be given to housekeepers for more mental and physical recreation and for the better care and training of children. Householders, though living separately in their own houses, will be enabled to avoid much household drudgery and cooking, and the expense and trouble of servants by getting such meals as they require sent into their houses from the central hall, or by taking their meals in the common dining room there. The tenants will also have daily or hourly domestic service provided in the houses from the staff of maids to be kept in the central hall, and in the grounds tennis courts, bowling greens, and playing fields are to be provided. Modern labor-saving appliances will be provided for the common use.

The proposal is to build 123 houses and three small quadrangles of flats. It is stated that applications for most of the houses have already been received.

LADY WITH THE LAMP.

Nurses and Soldiers Remembered in Her Will.

Florence Nightingale left property valued at $175,000, and its disposition was worthy of her. She left $5,000 in cash to nurses or others engaged in charitable work, and several considerable annuities where they were needed. Soldiers and nurses were always in her thoughts, and she remembered the former in the disposition of her most valued treasures.

She left the jewels given her by Queen Victoria, the bracelet given her by the Sultan, her other medals and orders, and an engraving of the ground round Sebastopol to the managers of the reading room at Herbert Hospital, or at Netley or Aldershot, "or at some other place where soldiers may see them." The bust of herself given to her by the soldiers she left in the same way. Her prints, including those of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, given her by the Queen at Balmoral in 1856, are divided among the Nightingale Training School for Nurses.

the astonishing harvest gathered from this one seed, and the owner of the wonderful crop is a Mrs. Gentry, who was following out a three-year-old Russian wheat planting experiment.

It will be remembered that General Levitsky, the author of the experiment, sowed a single grain of wheat in a conical pit about eighteen inches deep. As the grain began to sprout above the surface of the thin layer of soil placed over it in the bottom of the pit, it was earthed over. The next time it appeared there were several shoots, and the whole were covered again. Thence, till the pit was filled up, the earthing over process was repeated every time the grain appeared, the shoots having meanwhile multiplied till they filled the whole breadth of the top of the hole. One grain of wheat treated in this way by General Levitsky produced nearly 20,000 shoots, and necessarily increased its productiveness in an amazing manner.

Mrs. Gentry dug out a conical pit of the requisite measurement in a corner of her garden. There was only half an inch of soil between the grain of wheat which she placed in the bottom of the pit and the sub-soil of gravel. The top of the pit was about one yard across.

This was done some time in March, 1909, and the grain was just covered with earth. The next time, about three weeks later, the grain appeared there were half a dozen shoots. From then till harvest-time the sprouting grain was covered over and over again, until the pit was leveled up and a grass of wheat clothed the whole of the yard-wide circle.

During the ensuing winter this miniature crop of wheat, all springing from one grain, remained in the normal state of quiescence, and last spring it began to go ahead again, growing finely all through the summer until a week or two ago, when the bulk of it was obviously ripe for cutting. Mrs. Gentry gathered it. The crop then covered an area of about six square feet.

Eighty-five stalks of wheat were the outcome of the experiment. Twenty ears were of very large size and the grain of good quality; 50 were of medium size and a little below the average in quality, while the remaining 15 were still green and unripened. Today I was shown the wonderful little harvest, which is being carefully preserved in the cottage parlor. We chose an average ear from the bundle and counted the grains in it. They totalled 44, and therefore, allowing an average of only 40 grains for each ear of the 70 ripe ears, the grains produced by the single original grain are at least 2,800. The 70 ears weigh about four ounces.

WHY THEY DRIFT TO TOWN.

France of late years has been suffering from a drift of farmer's boys to towns. Conscription is held partially responsible for this trend, for the young soldiers are initiated into the pleasures of city life, and when their term is over they will not return to their native fields. Another cause of the exodus is the ravage of the vine-worm, which for twenty years has destroyed vineyards. Whatever be the cause, the fact remains, and agriculture will continue to suffer more each year from a scarcity of labor.

Another notable hero present was Mr. W. H. Pennington, of the 11th Hussars, famous as being the central figure in Lady Butler's well-known picture "The Charge of the Light Brigade." "I sat, or rather stood, to her four or five times. I had to look dazed and stunned by what I had been through, so she made me keep my mouth open. I told her that was not how I really felt, for I remember distinctly shutting my teeth very hard as I made up my mind not to bring discredit on my family, and get through it if I could."

A TENANTS' STRIKE.

A Town in Italy Has a Strike Against High Rents.

Torre Annunziatata, a town of 25,000 inhabitants at the foot of Vesuvius, has proclaimed a general strike as a protest against the exorbitant rents charged by the landlords. Twenty strikes have been declared there during the last four years, resulting in a victory for the strikers, but each time the landlords have seized the occasion to raise the wage-earners' rents, though the dwelling houses are unsurpassed in all Italy for their filthy and unsanitary condition.

Now with a big rise in food prices, the townsfolk refuse to pay the rent, and have risen en masse demanding thirty per cent. reduction. They have covered the doors, windows and balconies of the houses with flaring posters, on which are inscribed the words, "Down with the bailiffs," "Death to the landlords."

The situation is serious, as the bulk of those under notice to quit are supplied with knives and firearms, and are stubbornly resolved to resist attempts to evict them.

BRAVE MAN!

Silently the burglars proceeded from the pork pie to the Burgundy, from the Burgundy to the silver spoons.

But it was a house of antique build, and a board creaked.

"John," whispered a voice in the bedroom above, "I believe that there are burglars in the house."

"Well, I don't!" came the gruff reply.

"Wake up, John, and be a man!" she urged.

"What shall I do?"

"Do?" exclaimed his better half. "Why, go and catch them."

"All right, dear," answered John, and began slowly to crawl towards his dressing gown. Then an idea struck him. Seizing one of his slippers, and banging it upon the floor, he shouted:

"Hi, there! I shall be down in a minute!"

40 PERISH IN NEWARK FIRE

Girls and Women Were Burned or Killed by Falls

A despatch from Newark, New Jersey, says: A death-dealing fire, the most fatal that has ever visited the city, occurred in Newark on Saturday, when the old Domestic Sewing Machine Building, at High and Orange Streets, burned to the ground. Probably forty girls employed in the building met death and fifty were taken to the hospitals.

It was a little after 9 o'clock on Saturday morning, when Sadie Hanson, who works for the Anchor Lamp Co., on the third floor, was cleaning a carbon for a lamp. She had been using gasoline and somehow a switch near the machine she worked at sparked. There was a puff as the gasoline vapor leaped into flame and the girl's clothing began to blaze. Others working in the same room ran to her and attempted to put out the flames and subdue the fire that was eating its way along the floor by throwing bags of sand on it. In this way time was lost and the third floor was pretty well afire when one of the girls ran over to the fire house of Engine Company No. 4, across the way, and told Captain Darcie van Volkenburg that there was a fire in the factory. The captain telephoned on the alarms, and with the men in his company hurried to the building, which was then a mass of flame.

News of the fire had spread and the streets about the doomed building were black with men and women. Many of them were fated to see their children burned to death before their eyes. Women fought with the police to get through the lines and tore at the patrolmen's uniforms in frenzied efforts to reach their loved ones. Again and again the police had to drive the crowd back to make room for the bodies that firemen were carrying out. Twenty minutes after the fire had started all escape was cut off for the girls employed on the third and fourth floors. They gathered at the windows and many of them jumped. There was but one fire-escape and in a couple of minutes after the alarm of fire it was enveloped by flames. One hundred and twenty-two girls were employed in the building by the five firms quartered there.

CATTLE SHIPMENTS.

A Decrease of Over 20,000 Head
From Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: Considerable decrease was shown in Canada's export cattle trade for the season, which closed on Saturday with the sailing of the Montcalm for Liverpool with 792 head. The total exports for the season were 72,555 head, as compared with 94,314 last season, a decrease of 21,759 head. Shipments of American cattle via Montreal only amounted to 179 head, as against 7,227 last year, due to high prices at Chicago for export stock. The large decrease is partly accounted for by the fact that American exporters had to come to Canada to secure cattle to fill their contracts at United States ports, which sent large numbers of Canadian cattle abroad by American ports.

A GIGANTIC STATION.

Work on the C. P. R. Windsor
Building at Montreal

A despatch from Montreal says: It was stated at the C. P. R. on Wednesday that the new annex now being built at the Windsor street headquarters would have a sixteen-story tower, rising 280 feet from the foundations to the top of the flag-staff. Rapid progress is being made on the work, and over a thousand tons of structural steel have already been rivetted up. Five hundred men are engaged, and steel is being placed at the rate of 300 tons a week. Work will continue all winter, and it is expected the steel will be finished by April, when the stonework will be started. It is expected that the whole work will be finished by the end of 1912, when the station will be one of the very big railway terminals of the world.

CRIPPLED BY RHEUMATISM

CURED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 1st, 1910.

I am well acquainted with a man, known to thousands in Vancouver, Victoria and New Westminster, who for nearly a year was practically a cripple from rheumatism. He was so troubled with the disease that he found it difficult to even turn over in bed. His heart appeared so weak that he could hardly get up stairs. Last June, he received a sample of "Fruit-a-tives." He used them and dates his recovery from that time. To-day there is no other man in Vancouver enjoying better health. He was building a house this fall and shingled a good part of the roof in a driving rain storm without suffering any bad effects.

Mineral Known as Titanite Found in Pre-Cambrian Rocks of Quebec

A despatch from Ottawa says: A mineral known as titanite has been discovered about forty miles north of here in Allevyn township, Pontiac county, by H. M. Nelson of this city. This ore is a source of the rare metal titanium, and is a heavy, brown mineral containing forty per cent. of the oxide used in the manufacture of ferro-titanium alloys and in other industries. There are markets for this material in the United States and Europe. The allied metal molybdenum has been found nearby.

Druggists Are Exposing Families to Complete Ruin, Says the Recorder

A despatch from Montreal says: The cocaine evil is becoming an epidemic in this city. So much so that the authorities are waking up in the matter, and they find that the chemists are to blame a good deal in propagating the evil. His honor the recorder, in speaking of the evil, says: "For a few dollars the druggists are exposing the families of Montreal to complete ruin, and the future of our young people to abject disgrace through the cocaine traffic. They are assassins. I can use no other word to describe their conduct. I declare that there are a certain number of doctors who are conspiring with the druggists to continue this traffic. "Cocaine is the principal cause of the ruination of our young girls in this city, and the principal source of the demoralization of young boys. With the druggists conspiring against us, the police can do little. I am raising this cry of alarm to save the future of our families, and I call upon all public bodies to take all possible means to banish this cocaine traffic from legitimate commerce."

40 PERISH IN NEWARK FIRE

Girls and Women Were Burned or Killed by Falls

A despatch from Newark, New Jersey, says: A death-dealing fire, the most fatal that has ever visited the city, occurred in Newark on Saturday, when the old Domestic Sewing Machine Building, at High and Orange Streets, burned to the ground. Probably forty girls employed in the building met death and fifty were taken to the hospitals.

It was a little after 9 o'clock on Saturday morning, when Sadie Hanson, who works for the Anchor Lamp Co., on the third floor, was cleaning a carbon for a lamp. She had been using gasoline and somehow a switch near the machine she worked at sparked. There was a puff as the gasoline vapor leaped into flame and the girl's clothing began to blaze. Others working in the same room ran to her and attempted to put out the flames and subdue the fire that was eating its way along the floor by throwing bags of sand on it. In this way time was lost and the third floor was pretty well afire when one of the girls ran over to the fire house of Engine Company No. 4, across the way, and told Captain Darcie van Volkenburg that there was a fire in the factory. The captain telephoned on the alarms, and with the men in his company hurried to the building, which was then a mass of flame.

News of the fire had spread and the streets about the doomed building were black with men and women. Many of them were fated to see their children burned to death before their eyes. Women fought with the police to get through the lines and tore at the patrolmen's uniforms in frenzied efforts to reach their loved ones. Again and again the police had to drive the crowd back to make room for the bodies that firemen were carrying out. Twenty minutes after the fire had started all escape was cut off for the girls employed on the third and fourth floors. They gathered at the windows and many of them jumped. There was but one fire-escape and in a couple of minutes after the alarm of fire it was enveloped by flames. One hundred and twenty-two girls were employed in the building by the five firms quartered there.

CATTLE SHIPMENTS.

A Decrease of Over 20,000 Head
From Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: Considerable decrease was shown in Canada's export cattle trade for the season, which closed on Saturday with the sailing of the Montcalm for Liverpool with 792 head. The total exports for the season were 72,555 head, as compared with 94,314 last season, a decrease of 21,759 head. Shipments of American cattle via Montreal only amounted to 179 head, as against 7,227 last year, due to high prices at Chicago for export stock. The large decrease is partly accounted for by the fact that American exporters had to come to Canada to secure cattle to fill their contracts at United States ports, which sent large numbers of Canadian cattle abroad by American ports.

A GIGANTIC STATION.

Work on the C. P. R. Windsor
Building at Montreal

A despatch from Montreal says: It was stated at the C. P. R. on Wednesday that the new annex now being built at the Windsor street headquarters would have a sixteen-story tower, rising 280 feet from the foundations to the top of the flag-staff. Rapid progress is being made on the work, and over a thousand tons of structural steel have already been rivetted up. Five hundred men are engaged, and steel is being placed at the rate of 300 tons a week. Work will continue all winter, and it is expected the steel will be finished by April, when the stonework will be started. It is expected that the whole work will be finished by the end of 1912, when the station will be one of the very big railway terminals of the world.

FOUND DEAD IN HIS CABIN.

Tragic End of Aged Mail Carrier of Keewatin.

A despatch from Kenora says: John A. Fletcher, who had carried the mail at Keewatin many years, was found dead on Sunday in a cottage where he lived alone. He had been absent from his duties since Friday. When the house was broken open Fletcher was found dead on the floor, where he had evidently dropped from heart failure. Matches in his pocket, igniting when he fell, had burned the clothing up on one side from head to foot, scorching the flesh to a crisp. Fletcher was over 80 years of age.

A serious riot has taken place in Cork between O'Brienites and Redmondites, on Saturday.

C. P. R. LAYING OFF MEN

Business Between Winnipeg and the Lake Is Falling Off

A despatch from Fort William says: For the first time in ten years Canadian Pacific Railway freight traffic between the head of the lakes and Winnipeg has been reduced before the close of navigation. Train crews and engine crews have been laid off during the week, and indications are that further reduction in the staff will be made next week. The reduction is due to many causes, according to local trainmen. There is extremely little wheat being shipped compared with movement of 400 cars during November a year ago. The movement of live stock for export is also light. Another important item this year is the double track between Fort William and Winnipeg. The running time for handling trains has been almost cut in two. Last year only parts of the double track were used, and trains leaving here required as long as ten hours to make the trip to Ignace, 148 miles. The same mileage is now covered in six hours.

MONTREAL POLICE PAY.

Fifty More Men to be Appointed to the Force.

A despatch from Montreal says: The Board of Control has decided to increase the police force by fifty, and also to increase the pay of the men. Chief Campeau attended the session on Wednesday, and made the statement that the pay of the third-class men was so poor that it was impossible for him to get capable men. He produced statistics to show that Montreal policemen were the poorest paid on the continent. He also insisted that if proper police protection was to be given he must have at least two hundred additional men. The following new scale was decided upon: Third-class men, from $600 to $675 a year; second-class men, $650 to $700; first-class men, from $750 to $775.

BERNIER AT GREENLAND

All Are Said to Be Well on Board the Good Ship Arctic

A despatch from Ottawa says: Captain Bernier and the ship Arctic, which left Quebec on July 5th last, have been heard from. The explorer writes to Alex. Johnson, Deputy Minister of Marine, under date of Albert Harbor, August 13th, that the Arctic had fair passage as far as Greenland, where then encountered a good deal of ice and fog; that they sighted Cape York on July 27th, and anchored at Albert Harbor on August 3rd, where they built their first cache.

"In case anything might happen to us," the skipper says, "we are now proceeding to Salmon River to take a few salmon before we proceed to Beechy Island, where we will build cache No. 2, close to Sir John Franklin's memorials. From there I will call at Dealy Island, Melville Island, where I will see the condition of the cache which was left by Commander Kellet in 1854. From there I will leave a small depot at Winter Harbor in case our ship may be nipped by ice in McClure Strait."

The conditions were then favorable, there had been strong gales from the south and the south-west, indicating that the ice would be broken up. All on board were well. The Scotch whalers had a poor season, and Bernier added that if not successful in reaching Herschell Island he would winter in the best place he could get and return to Pond's Inlet for mails. One feature of the letter is the appeal of Captain Bernier for newspapers or magazines for himself and his crew.

A despatch from Calgary says: Fifty thousand dollars has been subscribed within the last few days for the proposed Calgary University. It is expected that $150,000 will be secured within the next week, and that several citizens will endow chairs in the university. Calgary is rapidly becoming a city of sky scrapers, the latest building in project being a new store for the Hudson Bay Co., which will probably occupy an entire block. A new six-storey business block is also to be erected on Eighth-avenue.

on Wednesday night, that 100 sections had been blanketed at the land office by individuals thought to be acting for the company. They have been boring there for several years and some time ago struck gas. The wells are now down several thousand feet.

In 1909 there were 93 fishing vessels sailing out of Lunenburg, with a total catch of 173,582 quintals of cod-fish, averaging 1,866 quintals per vessel. This year there were 102 vessels, with a total catch of 209,205 quintals, averaging 2,051 quintals per vessel.

Woman Runs Barefooted in Montreal Streets.

A despatch from Montreal says: Barefooted and half-crazed with cocaine, Mrs. St. Laurent, who lives in Outremont, on Monday walked all the way from a downtown hotel to the home of her mother, who hardly recognized her. The woman is temporarily out of her mind with the drug. She accuses a man named Joslyn of drugging her, and he was arrested and bailed till Friday.

When his absence was noted speedy search was made, but he was not found for several hours. When discovered he was alive, but died from the effects of exposure about an hour after.

A DEVASTATING FLOOD.

Many Miners' Cabins Have Been Swept Away.

A despatch from Cordova, Alaska, says: A disastrous flood, caused by the loosening of the waters of an internal lake in Bering Glacier, swept the Bering River valley on Thursday, devastating a large section southwest of the great ice field. Many miners' cabins were swept away, and grave fears are entertained for the lives of the occupants.

The new Parliament will assemble in Great Britain on January 31, 1911.

Both British parties are preparing for one of the bitterest election contests ever recorded.

Both Liberals and Unionists are concentrating on London during the approaching British elections, and both are confident of victory.

Mr. Wm. Redmond, M. P., brother of the Irish leader, will contest Cork City against Mr. Wm O'Brien, M. P.

The British suffragettes still continue to carry on disturbances in the British metropolis, and numbers have been lodged in jail.

A male suffragist assaulted Mr. Winston Churchill on Saturday, and was taken in charge by detectives.

The Rev. Dr. Hanson on his return home has informed the British people that four or five churches are erected in a single small area in Canada where one would suffice.

UNITED STATES.

The striking garment workers came into serious conflict with the Chicago police on Monday.

The Federal Government of the United States have indicted the Sugar Trust for infringement of the Sherman law.

The originator of the heavier-than-air idea and the inventor of the "glider," Mr. Octave Chanute, died at Chicago.

GENERAL.

Advices from Mexico indicate that the revolt in that country has been exaggerated.

The Brazilian Government have amnestied the mutinous sailors and conceded their demands for higher wages and shorter hours.

It is said that the Mexican Government have confiscated the property of Madero, the leader of the revolutionists.

The Kaiser's speech at Koenigsberg in which he claimed to be "the instrument of heaven" has led to an acrimonious debate in the Reichstag.

YOUNG GIRL'S HEROISM.

Saved J. A. Hyer, Mail Carrier, From Drowning.

A despatch from Rainy River says: A dramatic story of the heroism of the thirteen-year-old daughter of a settler near Clementson on the American side of Rainy River has just reached here. J. A. Hyer, mail carrier between Beaudette, Minn., and Clementson, was carrying half a ton of mail on a dog sled down the river when the whole outfit went through the ice. Hyer found the ice breaking every time he got hold of the edge, but his cries attracted Lizzie Alloway, who rushed down to the river, and, lying full length on the thin ice, got hold of Hyer's coat collar. She clung to him for twenty minutes, even after the water came over the ice and almost covered her. Hyer pleaded to let go and leave him, as he was convinced both would drown, but their cries brought three men, who happened to be near, and they dragged the girl over the ice, still clinging to Hyer, who was all but unconscious. All the mail, including a sack of registered letters, went to the bottom of the river and has not been recovered.

Manchuria Stricken—Measures to Stop Spread to Siberia.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: The whole of Manchuria is officially declared to be infected with the bubonic plague, but not with cholera, as was erroneously reported recently. Stringent measures have been taken on the Siberian frontier to prevent the entrance of the epidemic into Primorskaya. Supplies of serum have been sent to Vladivostok.

FRACTURED HIS SKULL.

Englishmen Fell Downstairs in Brantford Hotel.

A despatch from Brantford says: James Adams, an Englishman, 40 years old, was found in the basement of the Imperial Hotel early on Thursday morning with a badly fractured skull. He will die, Adams, it is thought, fell down the stairs, striking his head on the concrete floor. He recently inherited a sum of money from the old country. It was only last week that a bartender, Angus McLean, broke his leg in the same stairway.

NOTED PACKER DEAD.

Michael Cudahy Succumbs to Pneumonia in Chicago.

A despatch from Chicago says: Michael Cudahy, founder of the packing firm bearing his name, died on Sunday night of pneumonia. Mr. Cudahy had been ill for five days. He was born in Ireland on Dec. 7, 1841.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

Another Death in Chatham, Where Disease is Still Prevalent.

A despatch from Chatham says: Infantile paralysis claimed another life in the city on Thursday, when the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Robinson died of the disease. Infantile paralysis is still quite prevalent in Chatham.

HAS DOZENS OF USES.

Not a Particle of Waste in the Coconut Palm.

Probably the most useful tree in the world is the coconut palm, every portion of which is put to good use. The trunk is used for building houses, for making furniture and countless other articles; hollowed out it makes a canoe. Its leaves are used for thatching, the leaf stalks for paddles and fishing lines. The blossom in bud makes preserves and pickles, beside serving as a staple vegetable. From the pith is derived a kind of sago and from the flowers sugar, vinegar and toddy, which fermented becomes arrack. The ripe coconut is a valuable article of diet. The white kernel produces a delicious cream, a good substitute for milk, while the oil is used as a lubricant for soap and candle making.

The refuse of the oil is valuable as food for animals and as fertilizer. From the shell drinking cups, bottles, firewood and even tooth powder are obtained. The husk supplies fibre for mattresses, brushes, ropes, cables, nets and even the harness for bullocks. The web sustaining the foot stalks is made into strainers and broches. The tree acts as a conductor in protecting houses from lightning.

adopted without discussion and will be forwarded to Ottawa, was as follows:—"Whereas the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal would afford for the produce of the northern and western part of the American Continent the shortest and most advantageous route and would add an incalculable amount of progress and prosperity to the commerce, agriculture and industry of Canada and thereby to the City of Montreal would accrue immense advantage, be it resolved that the Parliament of Canada be requested to carry out this essentially national enterprise with the shortest possible delay."

EARTHQUAKE IN SPAIN.

Inhabitants Greatly Alarmed, but No Damage Occasioned.

A despatch from Madrid says: Earthquakes were felt early on Friday morning at Ferrol, Villagarcia, Vigo and Corunna. The inhabitants were greatly alarmed, but there were no casualties. Property escaped undamaged.

TRIED TO BREAK QUARANTINE

Smallpox Epidemic in Michigan Has Reached Alarming Proportions

A despatch from Detroit says: For the past three weeks a rigid smallpox quarantine has been maintained around the grounds of the Michigan Home for Feeble-minded at Lapeer, 30 miles outside this city. On Thursday night, shortly before midnight half of the attendants and some of the patients in the institution attempted to run the gauntlet of the sentries who patrolled the beats outside the grounds.

They were met by a volley from the rifles of the soldiers, all of whom are members of the Michigan National Guard. Nobody was hit, and a few minutes later another sortie was attempted, this time by three small parties, who tried to force a constant menace to the travelling public. He adds that he is prepared to adopt compulsory measures if the women do not comply with the request.

1,000 DROWNED.

Great Loss of Life by Floods in Indo-China.

A despatch from Saigon says: One thousand persons were drowned and four hundred barques were lost during floods in the Province of Quang Ngai, in Annam. The floods also devastated the Province of Quang Nam, to the north of Quang Ngai. One hundred persons were drowned and more than one thousand houses destroyed. Many fishing boats on the coast have been lost.

their way through the "dead line" at different places, hoping to thus confuse the soldiers. Another fusillade followed, and this time an inmate of the home was hit by a bullet in the leg. The shooting alarmed the main guard, who turned out in force and searched the grounds, finally driving the recalcitrants back into the building at the points of their bayonets. The excitement lasted for fully two hours. Capt. Frasier, who is in charge of the soldiers, declares that if another attempt is made to break quarantine his men will shoot to kill.

Conditions at the home remain about the same. There have been fifteen deaths to date and sixteen cases now in the hospital.

NEW STEAMSHIP SERVICE

The Elder-Dempster Company Will Run Monthly to Australia

A despatch from Montreal says: The enterprise of the C. P. R. in running a regular monthly service of cargo steamers between Montreal and Australian ports has been more than justified by the results and the service will be continued next year. There will, however, be competition for the traffic, for the Elder-Dempster Company will take cargoes for Australian ports direct from Montreal. The company has entered into an agreement with the German Australian Steamship Company whereby boats will be added to the present Canada-South African line, so that it may be extended to Australia, the sailings from Montreal being monthly.

The negotiations which have been going on between certain shipping interests and the C. P. R., relative to starting steamship lines to run between Canada and South American countries are practically completed. Mr. Bosworth announces that the line to South American ports will probably be started from Montreal next spring with a monthly service to begin with, while for the line to the West Indies new boats will have to be built. The proposal in regard to the West Indian line is to have a weekly service, with Montreal as the summer port and St. John, N. B., as the winter one.

The illumination of the town clock is a decided improvement, but the illumination would appear a good deal brighter if the stains were washed off the dials.

For over twenty years The Weekly Sun, Toronto, has occupied an enviable position, diligently serving the Ontario farmers. It is edited for their particular benefit and a special effort will be made during the coming year to make it even of more practical value than ever before. All interested in farming should read The Sun.

A public meeting in the interests of Local Option will be held in the Town Hall, Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, to be addressed by John C. Miller, Esq., of Orillia. This meeting is open to everyone and it is hoped there will be a full house to listen to the address on this important question.

At an early hour Monday morning a fatal accident occurred at the G. T. R. roundhouse in Belleville; the victim being George T. Ramsey, a young man of 21 years of age. He was operating a turntable, when he was caught in a narrow space between two engines, which were moving in opposite directions.

Wesley Parrott, a well-known and wealthy farmer, living near Wilton, has been suffering for sometime past with gangrene in one of his feet, and it is thought that amputation will be necessary in order to keep the disease from spreading to other parts of the body. Mr. Parrott has suffered three strokes in a short time.

The Kingston Whig in speaking of the reception tendered Joseph Powley, Grand Master of Grand Lodge of I. O. O. F. of Ontario, in that city on Friday evening last, says "The three links were very much in evidence last night. They represent a trinity of virtues for which the world has the very greatest need at the present time Friendship, Love and Truth."

Rev. Beverley E. Warner, Rector of Trinity Church, New Orleans, and a cousin of Mr. Harvey Warner, of our town, died suddenly of heart disease, on Sunday last, November 27th. Dr. Warner was a son of the late James Warner, Esq., of New York, who was a son of the late Stephen Warner, of Ernestown. Dr. Warner had lived for many years in New Orleans. He was 55 years old at the time of his death.

Cutting off his own hand with a razor after it had been crushed in a corn shredder, J. Bruce Vaughan, Eureka Mills, Charlotte county, Va., carefully bandaged the stump and calmly waited the arrival of a surgeon to put the finishing touches to the operation. Vaughan got his hand caught in a corn shredder. Medical assistance was not to be had for hours. Going into his own home Vaughan took his razor and performed the amputation.

Marshall Filson the young man belonging to Stella, Amherst Island, who was nearly killed about two weeks ago, by being dragged about a half mile by a colt, is still confined to his home and will be for some time. An idea of the seriousness of the accident may be gleaned from the fact that for days afterwards he had to be turned over in bed by means of a sheet. He was too sore to handle. It is the greatest wonder that he was not killed as artificial respiration had to be used to restore him.

We quote the following from the Railway News and Commercial Traveller: "According to the latest Government reports as the number of licenses are decreased, the consumption of liquor in Canada keeps increasing. There is certainly a big increase of consumption in the homes, especially in Scott Act and local option districts. In Nova Scotia last year, according to the secretary of the Dominion Alliance $6,000,000 was spent in drink. This shows an awful amount of intoxicants drunk where there is not supposed to be a bar except in Halifax, which is one of the soberest towns in Canada."

Municipal Possibilities.

It looks this year as if the citizens of Napanee were going to have the pleasure of selecting all the members of the Council and the Electric Light Commissioners by a general contest. From rumors on the street, there will be a general election all round. It is rumored that Mayor Simpson will retire on the first of January and that the Mayor's chair will be contested for by Councillor Kimmerly and Dr. C. M. Stratton. Reeve Alexander will find his seat opposed by Councillor John N. Osborne. Councillors Ming, Waller and Steacy will probably be in the field again this year and numerous names have been floating on the street in addition to those ex-councillors, as likely aspirants for Municipal honors as councillors.

Regulation is Best

Samuel Gompers says Prohibition is a Failure.

"Prohibition is a failure. I am not in sympathy with that movement." In this emphatic language Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared himself on the question of abolishing saloons when he refused to address a local option meeting.

The effect of his expressed attitude gave Arthur Burrage Farwell, leader of the daily temperance meeting, a sharp setback in his vision of winning the support of labor in the local anti-saloon fight by having labor's foremost leader offer encouragement to the cause at a public meeting. Gompers said:

"Proper regulation of the liquor traffic is much more effective for temperance than the abolishment of saloons under the local option or prohibition laws. I have noted the experience of cities both in the United States and in Europe, and I am convinced that prohibition does not accomplish what the prohibitionists are seeking."

Archivist for Ontario, delivered an excellent lecture to the members and friends of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society on Friday evening last. Mr. Fraser's subject "Provincial and Local Archives" was one which would not attract the uninitiated. However his explanation of the close relationship existing between the study of Canadian history and the preservation of Canadian Archives easily convinced his hearers that his department is a very important one and that the records which he is collecting are absolutely indispensable for the use of historians. Mr. Fraser closed his remarks with an appeal for the homestead, and paid particular attention to the influence of the mother, describing her as the heart of the nation. At the conclusion of his remarks the president thanked him for coming to Napanee, and for the many valuable ideas which he kindly gave to be used in cataloguing and describing the local collection. The meeting closed with "God save the King."

Opera House Dec. 9th.

Few plays of recent times have shown as much of heart interest as "The White Squaw." Over and above all else, it is a wholesome play and one that must find an appeal wherever a nature exists that acknowledges sentiment. The scenes are laid in the wilderness of Michigan about 100 years ago. Antoine Campeau, of Montreal, his wife and their two little daughters, Leah and Octavia were among the earlier of the hardy settlers who blazed their way through the forests that are now Detroit and its flourishing adjacent territory. Leah is dark, indicating her French ancestry on the father's side while Octavia has the golden hair and blue eyes of her English mother. Campeau goes on a hunt one day, allowing Leah to accompany him. He is slain by a wild beast and the child is rescued by an Indian, Michabo, who with his wife-Ampata, rear the child to believe she is a Red-skin and their own. It is when Leah, now known as Neamata, has grown to womanhood that the play opens. Octavia has also arrived at woman's estate and each is unaware of the other's existence. Through the workings of Fate the fair-haired sister has become the promised wife of a fur trader, Bruce Marshall whose duties lead him to the section where Michabo's tepee stands. He meets Neamata, takes a kindly interest in her and teaches her to speak English. In return Neamata, falls in love with him. Prior to this Neamata has been taught the French language by Jacques Cautier, a French Canadian trapper and he has fallen in love with the girl he supposes to be an Indian. Octavia and her chaperone visit the locality and the two sisters, unknown to each other, are brought face to face. It is from this maze of conditions that a dramatic chain is woven without a link missing to mar its completeness, beauty and interest. "The White Squaw" is said to be a play of America for Americans. There is not a jarring note in it; the story is told in a straight-forward, happy and convincing way and it is declared that from the rise of the curtain until the final word is spoken there is not a moment but the interest of the audience is held closely to the people and their doings in a little mimic world before the footlights.
